WEALTHY CHICAGOANS' BABY IS MURDERED

TODAY

Shall We Do Without Sleep?

Apes Abolish Tails.

Study the Ant.

Old Age and Babyhood.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

A half-developed being like man, hanging midway between primitive barberism and ultimate perfection, should study the insect tribes which appear to have realized the possibilities of development in their line.

The study of the ant and the bee, the spider and the scorpion should fill us with hope. We should say to ourselves:

"If these tiny fragments of life can develop so highly, what may not we hope for in the way of ultimate possibilities? Our beginning is so much more full of promise than the beginnings of our tiny insect brothers."

This writer, taking his own advice, which is most unusual, has been trying to get acquainted with some insects in the hope of cheering himself and getting new ideas.

From the female scorpion we acquire fresh veneration for the possibilities of maternal devotion.

The mother of the Gracchi has been well advertised because she preferred her sons to jewelry. The Russian mother who feeds herself to the wolves, instead of throwing her boy over the back of the sleigh in the usual way, is also highly praised. But their devotion shrinks to nothing when compared with that of any poor [illegible] Mexico's sandy [illegible] scorpions ar- [illegible] back, half a [illegible] of them or more. She moves about with them, protecting them, avoiding danger, giving them the sunlight. Meanwhile they are feeding on her body. Her movements get gradually slower and slower, finally cease. The young scorpions depart, leaving the mother scorpion simply an empty shell. We should dislike to see any such exhibition of tenderness among human beings, but we can't help admiring the scorpion.

Spiders, who construct tiny balloons with little cars all complete, are wonderful creatures. They cross chasms in their balloons, throwing out bits of trailing web which seem to act as rudders. In their little way and in a perfectly adequate fashion they have solved aerial navigation, which still puzzles us. We admire spiders and kill only those with yellow stomachs, which are poison.

CHILD IS SMOTHERED IN BED; CHLOROFORM USED, POLICE SUSPECT

Bottle of Ethereal Liquid and Cloth Steeped in it Discovered Near Body of Infant Son of John R. Allen in Their Apartment in Fashionable Hotel in Illinois Metropolis.

DETECTIVES CALLED BY HUSBAND FIND TOT'S MOTHER UNCONSCIOUS

Authorities, After Investigation, Claim Facts do Not Support Theory Suggested by Friends of Family That Burglars Had Killed Child With Blankets to Stifle His Cries.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 17.—With the discovery at dawn today of a bottle of chloroform and a cloth steeped in the liquid under the bed where the body of John Allen, Jr., 6 weeks' old, lay, Police Captain John I. Naughton announced he had found evidence pointing to murder.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Allen, wealthy Chicagoans, the parents, told the police they found the child smothered to death with a blanket drawn over his face, when they went into his room shortly after midnight. They said they had been entertaining friends in another part of their suite in the Belmont [illegible].

When detectives summoned by Allen arrived they found his wife unconscious. The husband said she had fainted when they discovered the baby was dead.

Allen is a member of the firm of Stackhouse and Allen, dealers in electrical and radio supplies. The Allens have a three-room suite in the hotel, a fashionable North Side hostelry. Up until within an hour of the time the baby was found dead, Mr. Allen said he had been entertaining Lawrence Gardner, president of the Garod company, a radio receiver firm.

Dresser Drawers Ransacked

When Captain Naughton and detectives first arrived at the Allen apartment friends of the family suggested that burglars had smothered the child with a blanket to stiffle its cries. It was not until some hours later that police found the chloroform and the cloth, they said.

Captain Naughton declared that the burglar trend was "not supported by

Kicks Wife's Shin In Bridge Game; No Divorce Cause

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—A husband may kick his wife's shins when she raises his bid at bridge, without furnishing grounds for divorce, it had been judicially determined today.

However, in the case of Mrs. Vira M. Schuman, suing Henry L. Schuman, Judge Samuel E. Kramer found other facts warranted the decree which was granted.

Mrs. Schuman testified that on the occasion of the "shin kicking" she raised her husband's bids, and he was set.

"Ofttimes there is plenty of provocation for losing one's temper on such occasions," the court observed.

COURT ORDERS ATTORNEY FOR LANSDOWNE'S WIDOW EJECTED

Uproar Occurs at Shenandoah Disaster Inquiry.

WOMAN ON STAND

Witnesses Not Allowed to Have Civilian Counsel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — An uproar was caused today at the resumption of the Shenandoah naval court of inquiry, when, by order of the gold-braided officers constituting the court, Joseph Davies, attorney for Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of the dirigible commander, was forcibly ejected from the hearing room.

An orderly acted as bouncer after Davies had "demanded to be allowed to represent" the Shenandoah commander's widow.

Mrs. Lansdowne herself was in the witness chair when the incident occurred.

Marine Is Bouncer.

When Mrs. Lansdowne, in her widow's weeds, took the witness stand, Davies, a well known Washington lawyer, and ex-member of the federal trade commission, stepped up to the back of her chair.

"May it please the court," he said, "I am here to represent Mrs. Lansdowne."

The court informed Davies that witnesses were allowed to have no civilian counsel.

Davies objected to any such ruling, and a wrangle of words followed, with the lawyers and the members of the court shouting at each other. He refused to leave, and the court instructed the orderly to put him out. It was done by a husky marine.

A portion of the audience broke into applause when the orderly escorted Davies from the room.

"Hold me for contempt and send me to jail but in fairness and decency I demand to be heard," shouted Davies.

Judge Advocate Cites Opinions.

Major Henry Leonard, judge advocate, told the court he had been advised that Davies would try to appear as Mrs. Lansdowne's attorney.

"I have prepared for it," Leonard added, after a marine orderly had ejected Davies.

Troops Thrown About Jail to Prevent Negro's Lynching

Centreville, Md., Mob Demands Life of Alleged Assailant of Farmer's 4 Year-Old Daughter.

CENTREVILLE, Md., Nov. 17. — A company of state troops was rushed here early today and thrown about the jail to prevent the lynching of Joshua Tiller, Negro, who is charged with assault on a four-year-old girl, daughter of a farmer near Millington.

The troops were called for after a mob of 300 persons had stormed the jail around midnight. They gained entrance over the protests of Sheriff Seward, but were unable to get to the cell occupied by the Negro because of steel doors. The sheriff had hidden the keys.

Several shots were fired in the mob's assault on the jail, but no one was injured.

Public indignation has been running high against the Negro since he was arrested. It reached the white heat late last night.

Sheriff Seward pleaded with the ringleaders to disperse and let the law take its course, but they refused, and it was only after inability to reach the prisoner that the crowd left, vowing to return. Sheriff Seward called Gov. Ritchie and the troops were dispatched.

TOLEDO POLICE SCOUR CITY FOR 'CLUB KILLER' WHOSE FOURTH VICTIM FLEES

Mysterious Giant, Blamed for Slaying Two Women and Injuring Third, Attempts to Murder Telephone Operator.

TOLEDO, Nov. 17.—Police were scouring the city today, in search of a person, believed to be responsible for clubbing two women to death, and the serious injury to a third.

The "club killer," after four weeks, became active again last night and attempted to kill Wilma Hoadley, 25, telephone operator, as she was walking along 20th street.

Miss Hoadley said a giant stepped from behind a tree and swung a club at her. The first blow ripped a gaping hole in her head. She dodged and the second touched her only slightly.

An automobile with glaring lights turned a corner and the club wielder fled.

Other victims of the "club killer" were Mrs. Emma Hatfield, attacked May 24, died September 9; Mrs. Lydia Baumgartner, found murdered August 21; Mrs. Frank Hall, severely injured walking along a street October 20.

BOARD OF EDUCATION URGES THRIFT IN SCHOOLS; ADOPTS SAVINGS PLAN

Penny System, Under Which From $600 to $1,500 Monthly Was Banked in Past Years, is Approved.

The board of education, meeting in the high school building last evening, went on record in favor of teaching thrift in the schools, when it approved a school savings system, operated by the Standard Savings Service of Pittsburgh.

A so-called penny savings system has been operated in the schools for several years under the direction of the Potters' Savings and Loan company. According to reports on file in the office of the superintendent, children bank from $600 to $1,500 monthly through the purchase of penny stamps which are sold through the teachers.

A representative of the Pittsburgh savings service appeared before the board last night to explain a plan which he declared was being operated in more than 200 cities in the tri-state district. He asserted that school children of East Liverpool should bank between $4,000 and $5,000 monthly through their system, which teaches the advantages of thrift. He explained that a local bank or loan institution would act as a depository and pay interest on all deposits of $1 or more. Speakers would be sent to the schools

Victims Die in Water Near Shelburne, Nova Scotia.

CREW OF CUTTER

Lone Survivor Thinks Ninth Man Also Lost Life.

SHELBURNE, Nova Scotia, Nov. 17.—How eight United States sailors—possibly nine—were tossed to death in a raging sea when caught in a squall in a small sailboat in the waters of Shelburne harbor was related in a gripping manner today by Charles Taylor, 19, of Bay City, Mich., the lone survivor.

Taylor said the victims were returning to their ship, the United States coast guard cutter Morrill, after they had dinner in Shelburne last evening. Their boat was caught in a storm and capsized.

Cling To Boat for Hours.

For hours, the sailors clung to the little boat, within the sight of the twinkling lights of Shelburne, until finally they gave up, one by one, and sank to the bottom of the water.

The dead, as far as Taylor could give them, were:

WARRANT PAYMASTER KINGSBURY, 28 years old.

I. J. BRACKETT, coxswain, 25 years old.

——— SAULISACK, first class seaman, 22 years old.

ONE.

Mrs. Gus Long and Mrs. Bob Roester were acquainted with all the gossip of Central City. What they did not acquire from direct observation, they learned through the delivery boys and ice man, or over the clothes-lines in the backyard from their more aristocratic neighbors' servants. Neither of these women were blessed with offspring; neither of them boasted any social connections. They had, however, each other. They were sufficient unto themselves. For nine years, ever since Mrs. Long, wife of a painter, moved into the other half of the double house owned by Mrs. Roester, [illegible]meet of a barber, these two had spent from two to six hours in each other's company, dealing out destinies in voices that were not always discreetly smothered.

The double house in which they lived was situated midway up that two-block strip of Washington street that rises abruptly from Main street to High avenue and establishes class consciousness in Central City. For this middle western city of 35,000 is situated at the foot and the top of a sheer hill, with Washington street as the neck of the figure eight its boundaries describe. When Central City outgrew the plateau upon which it was founded, it had to expand upward, and blasted Washington street out of shale to do it.

In the lower section, of course, is the business district Main street, and stretching away from it, like sore fingers on a dirty hand, the thoroughfares where live the workers in the plants of the National Axle and Bearing company, and the Tornado Fence company, the two industries which differentiate Central City from the other towns of its size in the state that are dependent for prosperity upon the favor of those who till the soil. Central City bustles under the smoke-haze that permits a comprehensive bird's eye view of the whole of the town only one day a week. It has an air of its own, literally and figuratively speaking.

In the upper division of that figure eight live the persons who do not fish for their livings in their sweat and who, consequently, "matter." Those who reside on these Olympian heights daily pass in review before Mrs. Gus Long and Mrs. Bob Roester, as the pair sit, Argus-eyed and serene, on the porch of the double house that clutches at the hillside.

Darkness had poured down the hill and engulfed all Central City except Main street's brilliant "White Way" when Mrs. Gus Long issued from her half of the house, and sat down in the squeaky porch swing, lightly humming. Her ear was tuned to hear anything that might escape the screen of the Roester side of the house. After a strained silence her ears caught the sound of feet upon a carpeted floor. Mrs. Roester was coming out.

"Cool enough for a wrap, Belle?"

"I guess I'd better wear my shawl."

The screen door slashed. Mrs. Bob Roester had failed again to keep Mrs. Gus Long from wearing the shawl, grand extravagance of a drunken husband, that she loved so much to show off.

"Bob's gone up to cut Noble Harwood's hair," she announced proudly.

"Goin' back in the mornin' to shave him."

"I'd think he'd have both done at thuh same time," Mrs. Long remarked.

"Too nervous. Bob always barbers him, you know, and he says Noble Harwood just fidgets in thuh chair somethin' awful when he's gettin' a haircut. Ain't so bad when it's a shave."

"Needs all his nerve t'morrer," Mrs. Long cackled, inducing a similar demonstration from her neighbor. "Juh read in thuh paper thur description of her gown?"

"Yes, pearls an' everythin.' I bet he paid for it."

"Course he did."

"Wonder what he's marrin' her for?"

"What does any old man marry a young girl like that for?"

Mrs. Roester did not reflect on the matter. "Well, he ain't so old. Fifty-two, thuh paper says. An' she's twenty."

They were silent for a minute as their eyes followed a limousine swiftly ascending the hill.

"I'll bet that somebody goin' up now—rehearsal or somethin' tonight, Bob said. He thought he might get to see it when he gets through barberin' Mr. Harwood. He thought Mr. Harwood might invite him. He expects Mr. Harwood will give him five dollars, or ten dollars. He wouldn't have went at night, except for that. Bob likes his evenin's."

"So does Gus. Lodge tonight. He's got a good chance of bein' Eminent Clarion next thuv 'iect."

"Bob gets five dollars for shavin' dead people, and I told him I thought he ought to get that much when it's a weddin'. He said he thought Old Harwood would give him at least five dollars, and maybe ten. Mr. Harwood always gives him a tip—a quarter or half dollar, usually, but this is a weddin'."

MADGE BELLAMY & GEORGE O'BRIEN IN "THE IRON HORSE" A WILLIAM FOX SPECIAL

Arthur Brisbane Lauds Photoplay at Ceramic Theatre.

The growing influence of motion pictures in educational work seems to have been exemplified in "The Iron Horse," a William Fox production based on the building of the first transcontinental rails, which was shown last night at the Ceramic theatre.

Such a picture, writes Arthur Brisbane, of Hearst's American, will do more to Americanize foreigners than any number of dreary sermons on the Constitution, and 100 per cent Americanism."

Mr. Brisbane goes on to say that "to see Lincoln walking in the White House corridors, to see live bison actually pursued by live Indians, and men laying the Union Pacific tracks under the fire of bows and arrows, is real education."

F. W. Mordaunt Hall, in The New York Times, remarks that "this is an instructive and inspiring film, one which should make every American proud of the manner of men who are responsible for great achievements in the face of danger."

The New York reviewers appeared to be unanimous in their judgment of the picture as an educational medium. "It is almost impossible to imagine any American seeing this picture play and failing to respond to its emotional appeal," wrote Quinn Martin, of The New York World. "Every steel spike seems to be driven with a tug at the audience's heart."

"A celebration, proud, loud and picturesque of the great American Odyssey,' says Gilbert W. Gabriel, of The Telegram and Evening Mail, while The Sun frankly announced that "it is one of the few films which this department can unhesitatingly recommend."

Alison Smith, in The Evening World, boldly asserted that "The Iron Horse" presents "the most truly dramatic sequence of scenes that the screen has caught for many seasons," while H. T. Torres, of The New York Commercial, says: "A great motion picture, a credit to the American picture industry."

In The Journal of Commerce, Edward E. Pidgeon writes that it is "a romantic and spectacular picture and one that for sincerity and detail, magnificence of background and convincing action, is in a class by itself."

"The Iron Horse' tells the story of the union of the railroads completing the link which bound the east and west in 1869. Scenes show the Union Pacific and Central Pacific engines meeting at Promontory Point, Utah, and others depict the life of the rail builders on the prairies. John Ford was the director, and the leading roles were played by George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy. The picture played for a year at the Lyric theatre, in New York City.

PRESS COMMENT ON WILL ROGERS

Humorist and De Reszke Singers Score Successes.

Here are critics' comments on Will Rogers and the De Reszke singers, who come to the Ceramic theatre next Monday, Nov. 23.

"Rogers is superb. He is tremendous, a magnificent success. He surpassed all my expectations."—Wm. G. Frizell, Dayton.

"Rogers and the De Reszke Singers the greatest concert attraction ever to play Cleveland. Unanimous opinion. Its the three ring circus of the concert world. De Reszke Singers prove as big a hit as Rogers. (Telegram)—Ralph D. Smith, Cleveland, Ohio.

"Will Rogers whirlwind success. In this home state people came from far and near. De Reszke Singers greatest quartette in the world. Greatest attraction ever to play Tulsa. Capacity house, hundreds turned away. Congratulate you on your usual clever vision."—Robert Boice Carson, Tulsa, Okla.

"The program given by Will Rogers and the De Reszke Singers at the Murat theatre Sunday afternoon was given a reception the like of which I have never experienced. The singing of the quartette was a revelation, and as for Rogers—well at 5:30 in the evening, after he had been on the stage for an hour and a half he had to quit from sheer exhaustion; and he could only get away then by asking the audience to please go home. By all means let me have this combination next year for three days or a week, if possible. And if you happen to have an open date at anytime during the present tour, I'll me glad to take it for a return engagement."—Henry K. Burton, Indianapolis, Ind.

"Birmingham talks of nothing today except Will Rogers. Over all our imagination still plays the lightening flashes of his penetrating merciless but kindly wit. We remembered you all evening with gratitude. For vivid personality keen and subtle humor it is understood by this form of presentation. Management function adverbially. Splendid publicity. Best regards. (Telegram)—The Beechers, Birmingham, Ala.

"Everybody is talking about Will Rogers. Not a dissenting voice as to the entertainment and wonderful compliments for the De Reszke Singers. Of course you knew this would be the case and I now know it. Put me down for a date next year."—Mrs. O. A. Shipman, Birmingham, Ala.

MEN'S LIFE SPAN PUZZLES SCIENCE

Do Married Men or Bachelors Live Longest Not Answered.

New York.—Which lives longer—the married man or the bachelor? Few other questions in vital statistics have been more widely discussed, says the New York Times. All information bearing on the subject has been studied by physicians, scientists, theologians, social welfare experts and criminologists, and with particular attention by the insurance companies.

The answer to this ancient question has a general and far reaching influence. If it is established that the chances of long life are greater for bachelors than for the married, both men and women will naturally be influenced in choosing between the two states. The moralist finds such statistics the basis for argument. For the insurance companies the question is a very practical one. Before millions of dollars are risked upon the expectation of life, the most reliable figures obtainable are gathered, regardless of trouble or expense.

Despite painstaking investigation, the problem today is still unsolved.

Hard Words for Bachelorhood.

One of the most distinguished advocates of the good influence of marriage on longevity, Dr. James Stark, registrar general of Scotland, said, after careful investigation, that "bachelorhood is more destructive to long life than the most unwholesome of trades."

An array of figures has been quoted to prove this extreme view.

According to Doctor Stark's figures, out of every 100,000 married men between the ages of forty and fifty, 1,407 die each year, as compared with 1,835 unmarried men who die among a similar number in the same period. In the early ages from twenty-five to thirty-five years, the proportion of deaths among the unmarried men is even greater. Out of 100,000 married persons, including widowers, from twenty to twenty-five years old, 626 die every year, while in the same number of unmarried persons between the same ages no fewer than 1,231 die annually.

According to other British statistics, the average number of deaths per year among unmarried men between the ages of twenty-nine and forty-six years is twenty-eight in every 1,000, while among married men in the same period the deaths are only 18.

A famous table prepared by Doctor Stark shows the contrast between the mortality of the married and the single is greatest between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, and varies considerably at subsequent ages. His summary of the yearly mortality per 100,000 is as follows:

Ages.	Married.	Single.
25-30	8.23	14.94
30-35	8.65	15.94
35-40	11.67	16.02
40-45	14.07	18.38
45-50	17.04	21.18
50-55	19.54	26.34
55-60	26.14	28.56
60-65	35.63	44.56
65-70	52.93	60.21
70-75	81.56	102.71
75-80	117.85	143.94
80-85	173.88	195.40

Some significant figures along this line have been collected by Bertillon, who formulated the familiar system of finger-print identification of criminals. The investigations of the statisticians of many insurance companies point to similar conclusions.

Old Ones All Married.

The greater longevity of married men over bachelors is also pointed out by Christopher von Rufeland in his work, "The Art of Prolonging Life." This authority goes so far as to say that "there is not one instance of a bachelor's having attained to a great age." He also asserts, as a result of his investigations, that "all those people who have become very old were married more than once." This condition, he says, applies to both men and women. Similar claims for the influence of married life upon longevity might be quoted indefinitely.

Some of the best minds of the age have studied the problem. The statistics above quoted have been attacked by no less an authority than Herbert Spencer. The great philosopher accepted the statistics gathered by the Scotch statistician and others, but disagreed entirely with the conclusion that marriage itself prolongs life. The experts of modern insurance companies, it is found, seem to agree with Spencer's reasoning.

The great mass of statistics on the subject indicates in the main that married men as a rule actually live longer than bachelors, and that the advantage, measured in years, is often considerable. The best information obtainable is that such is true in both America and Europe.

The latest figures on the subject are probably those gathered by Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance company of Newark. He has found that the death rate among single men in America is appreciably higher than among married men.

WHY PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND SANGRINA TO FAT PEOPLE

If I had not carefully analyzed, tested and seen my own sister reduce and improve her health with 'SAN-GRI-NA,'" says Dr. McAlpine, "I would not be recommending it to my patients to-day."

Dr. Jacoby writes: "My wife has about finished the 'SAN-GRI-NA' you sent her, and I wish you could see the wonderful change in her appearance. She never felt better in all her life."

"I have used 'SAN-GRI-NA' for my wife," says Dr. Harris, "and now recommend it to my fat patients."

"I recommended 'SAN-GRI-NA' to my mother," says Dr. Narbonne, because I knew, after working at the formula for years, it was absolutely harmless to the health and positive in results. It is the only way I know of to a good figure and perfect health."

REDUCES 63 POUNDS

"I weighed 260 pounds," writes Mrs. M. D. Pasquala, of Worcester, "and lost 63 pounds. . . . I would like to have another box of 'SAN-GRI-NA.'"

Up to now physicians have rarely advised anything to reduce outside of diets or exercises (both tiresome and inconvenient) because they knew of nothing HARMLESS and EFFECTIVE, but to-day in recommending "SAN-GRI-NA" a doctor feels that it is something with real merit, so entirely different from all the advertised fat reducers, that he does not hesitate to advise its use even to his own family. Prominent medical men, such as Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, endorses "SAN-GRI-NA" AS THE ONLY SAFE, positive and quick way to slenderness he knows of.

"SAN-GRI-NA" is the formula of a French physician. It is put up in a small, convenient tablet, to be taken three times a day. Although only recently introduced in America, "SAN-GRI-NA" is now recognized as a most effective treatment for fat people, because:

➡IT HAS REDUCED MOST OBSTINATE CASES OF OBESITY.

➡IT DOES AWAY WITH HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE, PUFFING, HEADACHES, TIRED FEELING, AND THE FAT MAN OR WOMAN WHO TAKES SAN-GRI-NA ONCE MORE ENJOYS LIFE.

➡IT IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC: Beware of worthless imitations. San-Gri-Na is sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. Go to your druggist today, be sure to ASK FOR AND GET THE FRENCH BOX MARKED "VERI-TABLETTES SAN-GRI-NA."

On sale at any good Drug or Department Store. If your druggist does no carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C.

Miles of Flying Ants Invade Adirondacks

Saranac Lake, N. Y.—A great column of flying ants recently passed down the Raquette River valley section of the Adirondacks. A cloud of insects estimated to be four miles long required an hour and a quarter to pass given points. Amazed residents at first believed the cloud was smoke from a forest fire. The ants flew in great sections, but the sections were never more than a few feet apart.

After the passing of the column, the river surface was covered with the bodies of thousands of insects that had flown too low. The ants were about a quarter of an inch long with the exception of the queens which measured a half inch. Flying ants are new to the Adirondacks.

Seven-Ton Meteorite Found in Greenland

Aberdeen, Scotland.—The third largest meteorite in the world just arrived here from Greenland aboard the Danish schooner Sokongen. Nobody here has yet seen the stone, but Captain Pedersen of the Sokongen says it weighs seven tons.

Eskimos are said to have stated that the meteorite fell in 1918 and that they had been dragging it toward the coast on dog sledges since 1923. Much difficulty was encountered in taking the meteorite on board the Sokongen. Captain Pedersen said he had much trouble in steering his vessel to Aberdeen, because the stone deflected the compass.

The Sokongen in 1924 rescued the Danish explorer, Peter Freunehen, who had been lost in Baffin Land for three years.

Of the two larger meteorites in existence, one is in the United States and the other in Great Britain.

Motor Tax Cut

The congressional proposal to cut the federal tax on motor cars from 5 per cent to 3 per cent is sailed with joy by nearly 20,000,000 automobile owners. It pleases especially the prospective buyer of a new car, for this tax applies only on purchases. The motor car manufacturers have all pledged themselves to pass along the saving to their customers. This should mean an average saving of $15 to $20 a car.

In view of the fact that automobiles are subject to more taxes, federal and state together, than any other form of property, a very good argument can be made for abolishing this federal tax altogether, thereby benefitting the average automobile purchaser to the extent of $40 or $50.

Perhaps the finest thing, however, about the proposed reduction, is the manufacturers' pledge of good faith. This example is one that might be followed more generally in industries benefitting by federal tax remission.

The Stock Market

Stocks suddenly slumped the other day more spectacularly than they had risen. Perhaps the boom was over-played. What goes up must come down. It is the nature of mounting waves to sink back. Tighter credit threatened. The public grew doubtful and scary, the professional "shorts" sought to cover. So quotations fell.

They may jiggle up and down for a while. These things are in the hands of the gods of chance. But underneath the up-swing and the tumble and the jiggling are big, basic facts that will determine the securities curve through the winter.

The long climb of stock prices reflected, without doubt, the very strong economic situation in America and the rational expectations based on it by long-visioned men. It represented, too, without doubt, the more promising situation in Europe, especially since the treaty of Locarno. With prosperity at home and a stable market promised abroad, with greater promise of payment of foreign debts, what business heights would be impossible?

The slump probably reflected, along with the causes suggested above, a new flurry of fear about European peace. Things have looked less sure lately in Germany and France.

Draw a red ring around a date on the calendar. The date is December 1. On that day the powers signing the security guarantees and arbitration treaties at Locarno are scheduled to ratify them in London. If they do, Wall Street may blow the lid off, while pacifists and humanitarians generally celebrate in their own way.

Religion From Police

A police officer is usually expected to wield a club in literal enforcement of the written law—not to probe for the ultimate cause of crime and suggest fundamental remedies.

Richard E. Enright, police commissioner of New York city, isn't content to be merely a club-swinger. He frankly admits the crime wave, and looks beyond the actual criminal. He finds the cause of it in the state of mind of society as a whole, and proposes the same remedy that was advocated by President Coolidge.

"We must get back to religion," says the commissioner, "back to God, back to home life and prayer, back to the old home standards, back to personal supervision of child by parent, back to purity of standards of living.

"We must get away from irreverence for God, for home and for father and mother, away from irreverence for law, away from booze parties, petting parties, lascivious literature, false standards of life and all that lead to them."

Here, as every thoughtful person will probably admit, is the literal truth. And it puts the responsibility up to every individual instead of leaving it to the police, the clergy and the educators.

Boll Weevil Licked

The American cotton crop this year amounts to 14,000,000 bales, which is a bouncing crop if not a bumper one. It would have been 15,000,000 bales except for a burning drought in Texas. It means plenty of cotton for America and the rest of the world and a boost for southern prosperity.

It means something more notable than that. A few years ago cotton-growers were very pessimistic. The boll weevil was making steady headway. They feared it was going to destroy the great cotton industry. Now the tide has turned. Man has learned how to fight this pest, and is winning. The 1925 crop proves that at last the weevil is definitely on the run.

Russians, observing the crazy gyrations of the compass in the province of Kursk, have explored there and found rich iron fields. Now they should take their wobbling political compass and search for a vein of common sense.

Not many prospective rulers could be unseated as many times as the Prince of Wales and still hope to rule.

If income taxes are reduced much more, the simplest way out of it will be to make an honest tax report.

Yes, Christmas comes but once a year; but the enthusiastic celebrant can spend all year paying for it.

Tomboy Taylor— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—There is a conviction even extending to literary men themselves that drink and drugs have played important parts in the lives of genius. Without disease or stimulants there are no sparks. Poe and Stevenson, fighting tuberculosis, wrote best when they felt worst.

Swinburne cut off from the bottle failed as a poet. And they point to DeQuincey, Rossetti and Coleridge. One could go on indefinitely—Nietzsche and even our own O. Henry and Jack London. The list is long. And yet it is easily overshadowed by sober and healthy genius.

Even Wilde did his most notable work away from boulevard tables. And Byron sober was a better Byron. One wonders what would have happened to the artistic creation of the drugged and drunken children of genius without stimulants. Perhaps better work. Who knows?

This I notice. Men who are doing the finest work in a literary way in New York are temperate. Once in awhile they step out for a little toot, but it is a tame proceeding. Best sellers are from women who never touch liquor—Edna Ferber, Fannie Hurst and Kathleen Norris, for instance!

The crack newspaper reporters of Park Row these days are temperate. Two able humorists quit drinking some years ago and are doing their best work. The highest salaried special men on New York papers are those who seldom indulge more than a cocktail at a sitting. Or standing.

Channing Pollock, George Kaufman, Laurence Stallings, Maxwell Anderson and nearly all successful playwrights are extremely temperate. This is largely true of musical comedy librettists, lyricists and composers. And the theatrical producer is almost invariably a teetotaler.

It may be opium, alcohol and microbes have something to do with genius, but it can be rather satisfactorily proved genius can get along without them.

It used to be the boast of an old Park Row reporter that the best story he ever wrote was written when so cooked he couldn't see the typewriter. He didn't know for years he never wrote the story he treasured. It was dashed off by the sober head of the copy desk who could only glean bare facts from the drivel.

I believe experience of most newspapermen are applicable to every writer. Two drinks and work is about the least of all things they care to do.

There are many views of the liquor question. For instance, there is a big executive who rarely places a man in an important post if he finds he is a teetotaler. He has a theory such men have other weaknesses more harmful.

Students of the narcotic question will tell you there are men and women in important posts who have been addicted to drugs for years. They never show it, they say. They bear the respect of business associates and friends. They have no part in the drug orgies of Broadway. In most instances they took to drugs to relieve pain and became chronic addicts. Their plight is known only to physicians. Their enslavement often prevents them from promiscuous association. They live in fear of their secret becoming known.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Colorado River Development.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17.—The Colorado river, aside from flowing through the most magnificent gorge in the world—the Grand Canyon—and delighting tourists with its matchless scenery, also offers itself to the population of seven western states as the source of untold water power. Again it shows itself as a factor to be reckoned with, for its floods menace those who live in its basin. There is need, then, of shackling the stream, both for the utility and the safety to be derived. The seven states interested are California, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, and Wyoming.

In its review of 1925, the department of the Interior presents some general aspects of the problem, and in a report of voluminous proportions, prepared by E. C. LaRue for the department, a wealth of data concerning the subject is given which will serve as a basis for future development.

The Colorado is one of the remarkable rivers in the world in its value for irrigation and water power. Its present opportunities for the complete use of an immense quantity of water, great concentrations of fall, reservoir sites for the control of flow, sites for power plants, and several million acres of irrigable land below the stretch where power may be developed. In this sense it is similar to the Columbia, which also may be used for both water power and irrigation, but no other river on the North American continent presents such tremendous opportunities for the double use of its water.

The drainage basin of the Colorado covers an area of 244,000 square miles. This is one-thirteenth of the area of the United States. It flows into the Republic of Mexico, where it is used for irrigation. Its resources constitute the most important undeveloped asset of this great region and will play an important part in the development of agriculture, industry, wealth, and population. Hence the problems of its development assume an interest of interstate, even international proportions.

Perhaps the most urgent need of the basin is the flood protection of communities and large irrigated areas near Yuma, Arizona, and in the Imperial Valley in California. The value of property in these regions is more than $100,000,000, and the prosperity and lives of thousands of persons on either side of the international boundry are menaced. The Colorado, surging to the Gulf of California, carries with it an immense burden of silt. It builds up its bed across the delta, making necessary the building of dikes and levees in order to confine it. The flood menace increases with the advance of years and the cost of maintaining levees as defence against it is increasing too.

Natural Advantages.

The Colorado and its upper tributaries rise in the mountains of Wyoming, Colorado, and Utah. The precipitation in this section, especially in the form of snow, is very heavy. The valleys of the upper tributaries have an excellent climate that is well adapted to agriculture and industry. Combined with these advantages is the beautiful scenery that makes the region attractive for the building of homes.

The irrigable lands in these valleys in part have been irrigated and cities and towns built, and a substantial development of the region is under way. Additional irrigation here will deplete somewhat the present flow of water in the canyon or power section of the river and in the lower part of the basin where the largest arid areas are situated. Only a few small water-power plants have been erected although there are many available sites. The utilization of water-power sites does not decrease the water supply of the river except through the increased evaporation caused by the increase in water surface exposed to the sunlight and air in new storage reservoirs. Therefore there are good reasons why there should be a development of the upper basin and the utilization of available water supply for both power and irrigation.

The canyon section of the river offers the second largest concentration of water-power sites in the United States and the third largest on the North American continent. Its only superiors in this respect are the St. Lawrence and the Columbia river basins. These rivers also are international, with the advantage lying on the Canadian side. Equalization of flow in the St. Lawrence is accomplished naturally by the Great Lakes. An equally effective control of flow may me accomplished with the Colorado by the construction of reservoirs.

Generation of Electric Power.

Therefore the value of power sites in the Colorado may be increased greatly by building reservoirs in or near the upper end of the stretch of great fall, whereby the erratic natural flow of the river may be converted into a discharge that will be nearly uniform over a period of years. Dam sites have been discovered and surveyed in the canyon section that make possible the utilization of the whole fall or any part of it that may be desired.

The need for further agricultural development of the Colorado river basin will increase, but teh necessity for electric power in the bason and in contiguous regions will increase more rapidly. A program for this development must be followed cautiously and not in advance of actual requirements. The department of Interior thinks that too rapid an advance would be uneconomical and would result in losses of invested capital.

Another point to be considered in the development of the Colorado is navigation. It has never been satisfactory, although steamboats have come from the Gulf of California up as far as the old town of Callville at the lower end of Boulder Canyon. Before the coming of the railroads navigation was slight but important. Since the coming of the railroad navigation has been continued but its importance has decreased. Sand bars, shifty and treacherous, and dangerous rapids constitute a great obstruction.

The erection of dams for storage and power will provide safe access by boat to certain parts of the canyon section of the river which are now inaccessible except at the risk of great danger and at considerable expense. A dam in Glen Canyon will make it possible for a motor boat to penetrate 150 or 200 miles further up the river traversing a country now inaccessible, that is replete with beautiful scenery.

The construction of an automobile road from a trunk-line railroad to some point on the backwater of such a dam would open up one of the most attractive tourist areas of the continent. Other dams would create longer or shorter stretches of clack water and would open other beautiful canyons to tourists. These projects would make the Grand Canyon navigable and open up a country which surpasses in beauty the famous Norwegian fijords.

The Colorado river development idea has been under consideration since the beginning of the century. It is now taking concrete form and soon may become a certainty.

YOUR HEALTH

How Sight Is Restored to Cataract-Blinded Eyes

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

MANY persons write asking about the operation for cataract. They want to know if it is serious, whether it hurts or not and what the chances are for success.

I doubt if there is any other subject in medicine which I can write about with greater confidence than I can upon this particular one. It so happens that during my professional life I have had the privilege of operating upon a multitude of cases of cataract and restoring hundreds to sight.

These patients have come from all walks in life, from the rich and from the poor, from those in middle-age and from old persons.

You will recall that cataract is essentially a disease of advanced life. There is a form found in babies, but this is not the kind we are talking about to-day.

Cataract is a disturbance of the crystalline lens of the eye, a structure that lies in the interior of the eyeball. It is not a growth of a film on the outside of the eye as many persons think.

The operation consists in making an incision through the outer covering of the eye, opening the eyeball itself. You can see that this will permit the fluids of the eye to run out, and the operation must be very skilfully done or it will destroy the sight.

Having opened into the eyeball, the surgeon removes or scoops out the crystalline lens which has become opaque and no longer permits light to enter the eye.

This procedure may seem formidable. As a matter of fact, it is quickly done. The entire operation takes less than a minute or two. Cocaine or some chief local anesthetic is employed, so that the operation itself is painless.

The eye is bandaged and the patient is put to bed for the one purpose of being kept quiet so that healing may progress. In a little while the effects of the local anesthetic pass away and there may be some smarting and burning in the eye, but this will last only two or three hours, and is not severe in most instances.

It has been my practice to leave the bandage undisturbed for a couple of days. During this time there is no discomfort beyond the inconvenience of keeping quiet in bed. After the first time the eye is redressed, a new dressing is put on every day, and in four or five days the patient is permitted to leave the bed.

In a case less favorable than this there may be some reaction and the development of a low degree of inflammation, known as "iritis." This complication delays complete recovery, but by skilful treatment it speedily disappears.

After the recovery is complete, it is necessary to wear glasses to overcome the loss of the crystalline lens. That is the reason why persons who have been operated for cataract wear such thick glasses.

There is no operation known to surgery which is so satisfactory because of its immediate beneficial results.

Bodies of Two Babies Buried With Permits Exhumed on Farm

DOVER, O.—The bodies of two babies were exhumed on the same farm within two weeks—the graves only about 500 yards apart.

On Thursday, November 3, Coroner Lewis found the first grave contained the body of the three-hour-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Arthur Benfer. Jerry Hartline, the child's grandfather, confessed to burying the first child, and was fined $50 for burying without a permit.

A sheriff's investigation resulted in the arrest of Russell Hartline, son of Jerry Hartline. Later, on trial on the same charge his father faced a few days previous, he was fined the same amount.

Russia's bumper grain crops this season caused depression to agricultural markets in nearby countries, business becoming dull in Latvia and the agricultural products trade becoming stagnated in Rumania in what is usually an active season of the year.

Q. Who has the authority to determine the colors for automobile license plates? A. M. E.

A. The Motor Vehicle Commissioners of the individual States determine the color of the automobile number plates.

Q. Why do leaves turn red and yellow in the autumn and then drop off the trees? .K. S.

A. The brilliant colors of dying leaves in the autumn are due partly to chemical changes in the decaying chlorophyll and partly to the exposure of pigment cells previously concealed by an abundance of chlorophyll or other feature of vital activity. The leaves drop because they no longer receive nourishment from the stem or twig.

Q. How often does mail leave this country for the Philippines? C. M. K.

A. The Post Office Department says that steamers carrying mail to the Philippines leave the west coast approximately five or six times per month.

Q. What is the highest speed ever attained on a typewriter? C. V. R.

A. The matter is relative involving the auspices, the intensity of test material used, and relation of accuracy to speed, etc. According to the official figures from the International typewriting contests held under the auspices of the Business how Company, the highest gross record ever made in the professional classification that is, where the writing period is for one hour was made by Miss Hortense Stillnitz on a Remington machine in 1917 when she wrote at the rate of 159 words per minute. Her net record, after a penalty of five had been deducted for each error, was 152 words per minute for the hour. In October 1923 Mr. Albert Tangora, writing on an Underwood, made a net record of 147 words per minute for the hour, but the material used in this test averaged less in stroke intensity that the record above mentioned by Miss Stillnitz.

Q. Why do explosives used in blasting stumps appear to be more powerful when the ground is wet? C. D.

A. The Department of Agriculture says that when the ground is wet the air spaces are filled with water and, as the water is not compressible, much greater force is exerted against the stump.

Q. In Kipling's poem, "The Native Born" I find the phrase "Your foot on the table." What is its significance? N. S. N.

A. Ralph Durand, in his Handbook to the Poetry of Rudyard Kipling explains this line as follows: "It is an old and excellent Scottish custom to drink toasts to those whom it is especially desired to honor, with one foot on the chair and the other on the table."

Q. Who was known as the "Mad Anthony Wayne of the Confederacy?" H. S.

A. This nickname was given to John S. Mosby (1833-1916), a soldier in the Confederate service, noted for his remarkable career as a leader of an irregular force of cavalry. I. R.

WHAT you want in oats is flavor. Everything else takes second place. Oats originally a Scotch dish must have true Scotch flavor to be at its best—real "Mother's Oats" flavor.

Nobody has yet succeeded in imitating Mother's Oats flavor. That enticing and toasty Scotch tang of the Mother's Oats brand.

People who ordinarily don't take to oats, find delight in that unique flavor. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary brands.

So when asked to "try" a substitute, say "NO."

That flavor is not the result of guesswork but of certain Mother's Oats milling processes applied to the finest, plumpest oats that grow. Some 50 years were spent in perfecting it.

Quick Mother's Oats cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. It makes the finest, the most savory and quickest of hot breakfasts.

WEIRTON BLAZE BEING PROBED

Authorities are conducting an investigation into the cause of the fire which recently destroyed the Flint garage in Weirton resulting in a loss estimated at $30,000. The building and 15 machines were totally destroyed. The loss is covered by insurance.

Members of the Weirton Fire Department arrived on the scene of the fire too late to check the leaping flames, which had already undermined the entire structure. The fire call, which had been sent by telephone, was not accompanied by an address or location, and the firemen were unable to locate the fire for more than an hour.

A call to Lorell's garage at Main street and Ferguson avenue was received Thursday evening. Fifty gallons of chemicals were used to put out the flames caused by a burning machine. The origin of the fire is being investigated.

DRIFTING WORKER IS TIME LOSER

Frequent changing of jobs is not approved by C. M. O'Neal, examiner-in-charge of the federal-state employment office, who declares that a great number of the workers lose a third of their time in going from place to place and seeking new jobs.

"There is still a great drift among workers,' says he in his report for October, "especially among miners and common laborers, but it is not so noticeable now as during the summer and early fall. Those who are always changing jobs don't stop to figure what a loss it means to them in dollars and cents. Moreover, the drifting worker is a discontented worker, as a rule, and therefore not a valuable employee."

"Practically all industries of the state are now operating on a full time basis and a great many are adding to present forces of workers to take care of additional business," the report said.

"Opportunities for employment in the state are good, yet I hear the remark, several times each day that jobs are scarce, but these remarks as a rule come from persons when offered a job have some excuse for not taking it and these are the persons that are continually complaining about hard times.

WATER SUPPLIES BEING INSPECTED

Many improvements are being made to assure safe water supplies for the citizens of West Virginia, announces E. S. Tisdale, chief engineer of the division of sanitary engineering of the state department of health. "It is noteworthy," he said, "that several of these have grown out of events, such as floods and serious epidemics which have aroused the people to the realization of the need of a system which will adequately safeguard their health at all times." In keeping with this, the water supplies of Harpers Ferry, Ridgeley and various other places in the eastern part of the state are being inspected at the present time.

Astronomers Declare Wanderer Headed for Earth is Harmless

MOSCOW — Announcement from the Pulkovski observatory in the Chimea, of the discovery of a new comet apparently headed for the earth has elicited reassurances from the astronomical department of the University of Moscow that the stellar wanderer is quite harmless and will never come nearer than several billion miles of us. The new comet is in the constellation Pisces, and is discernible only with the highest powered telescope.

Its discoverer, Prof. Scheiu, has established a reputation for bagging comets. This is his second year. According to the Moscow University, an average of five such comets yearly are discovered, most of them fading out of sight within a few days or weeks.

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! REVAMP PERMIT SYSTEM TO CUT LIQUOR SUPPLY

NEW REGULATIONS

Andrews Investigates Illegal Transportation of Intoxicants.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Another move to cut down the gigantic supply of liquor which goes onto the botleg market was taken today by Gen. L. C. Andrews, prohibition czar, when he directed a complete revamping of the present system.

Thousands of permits which have been issued in many states for the manufacture of wine for home consumption will be revoked outright.

Regulations pertaining to the supply and distribution of medical wine and whisky, and sacramantal liquors will be rewritten to reduce the amount of these intoxicants sold to that required for legitimate use.

Carriers Must File Bonds.

Andrews already has established iron clad regulations for the movement of liquors on railroads, providing that the carriers must file heavy bonds with the prohibition authorities to guarantee protection against law violation.

A general investigation of the illegal transportation of intoxicants by rail is in progress and further steps will be taken by the prohibition office to stop what is believed to be a widespread conspiracy to violate the law.

The industrial alcohol manufacture and distribution system is under reorganization. Operation of regulations already in effect is said to be resulting in at least a partial check on legitimate diversions.

In the study of the prohibition situation Andrews discovered that an enormous number of permits have been issued for the manufacture of home consumption wine in many states. These permits were issued under the old revenue act. A considerable quantity of this liquor is believed to be going onto the bootleg market.

Plan to Stop Leaks.

Andrews has experts studying the sacramental and medicinal liquor situation. No details of possible provisions of the new regulations have been made public, but it was stated that a material reduction in the distribution of these intoxicants will result.

Regulations will be issued soon to stop up many of the leaks. Some minor amendments to the revenue act have been recommended and it is possible that other changes will be suggested to congress.

Responsibility for enforcement of minor infractions of the laws should be assumed by state, county and municipal governments, treasury officials asserted today, replying to the attack on the government's new dry policy by Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon league.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY — BY EDGAR POE NORRIS

"Yeah, but she'll be happier t-morrer night, when they're really married. Lot can happen before then, y' know."

"Yeah. Wonder what his daughter thinks?"

"You know they don't like it. But what they gonna do? I bet they're afraid of him. You know they said he drove his first wife into thuh streets."

"Wonder what she thinks?"

"I suppose she's heard thuh news. But she should worry—with all that alimony, and Europe to spend it in. Bet she's lookin' around for a dook or somethin'. Central City never did suit her."

"Wonder what her sister thinks?"

"Who? Old Mrs. Harwood's sister? She ain't got no sister, has she?"

"Oh, you mean Bernice Todd. That's what they say. They say she was after him but he got his eyes fixed on her sister."

"Well," Mrs. Long set forth, "their mother won't care, 'slong as it's one of them that's marryin' old Harwood's money. He's got ten million dollars, Gus says. A man at thuh bank that Gus knows told him so."

"Wonder what that fellow she used to go with thinks—that Wyman Holt?"

Mrs. Bob Roester laughed. "He won't care if old Harwood dies soon."

Mrs. Long appreciated the observation hugely. "Yeah, then he'll be marryin' the money."

Mrs. Roester's cackle continued. "Old Harwood must be blind."

"Well, his daughters will watch her. You know they'll ant to get somethin' on her. That married daughter of hisn is older than she is, you know. She's 26, thuh paper says. That makes her six years older than her step-mother." Again both laughed.

"They say her husband's furious. He hoped old Harwood wouldn't remarry. Then there'd be just thuh two daughters to share thuh money."

"I wonder if SHE thinks she'll be happy?"

"Why not? With all that money?"

"Yeah, I guess so." Her eyes rested upon a limousine climbing the hill at a moderate pace. "Look, Josie, that's her now! That's her in the limmysine with her mother. Look!"

A tiny bulb in the hurrying car revealed the severe visage of an elderly woman and a younger figure immediately recognizable as her daughter. It was indeed Mrs. Wellington Todd and her daughter, Laurel, who on the morrow was to wed Noble Harwood. The lips of the daughter were moving. Mrs. Long could see.

"Wish I knew what she's sayin'," Mrs. Long confided.

And if she only could have known!

J. R. SHEA, chief boatswain's mate, 23 years old, of Providence, R. I.

Taylor thought a ninth man lost his life, but in his exhausted condition today he could not say for sure.

Battle Between Life and Death.

His own story was one of a battle of overwhelming odds between life and death fought in Shelburne harbor. Although only a short distance from the town, none could hear nor see them, and none could aid them.

The Morrill, on her way from the Great Lakes to Boston, had put into Shelburne, four days ago, and anchored off the light at Sandy Point, about five miles from the town. Her boat's crew of nine or ten picked men had come to Shelburne, bringing with them a sick comrade who was to have been sent to a hospital at Halifax. They had leave for the day.

Sink One by One.

"Darkness was rapidly closing down," said Taylor. "Our little boat, 26 feet long, had gone about half its distance to our ship, when we were struck by a squall.

"Our boat was immediately capsized. This was in the center of the upper harbor, about three miles from shore, and about two and one-half miles from our ship.

"We seized hold of the overturned boat. The heavy seas tossed us about. We hung on for dear life. We called out for help but, of course, no one could hear us."

The heavy seas seemed to reach at the victims like hands of death and in the darkness snatched them, one by one, from the hulk.

"One by one they sank," said Taylor, tears in his eyes. "Finally there were only two of us left. We looked at each other—our eyes spoke volumes.

"He was my mate, Shea."

Tries to Save Mate.

"Meanwhile our boat was being swept toward shore. The water became shallow. When we came to 100 yards from the shore we threw ourselves clear of the boat and attempted to swim the distance.

"I tried to save Shea, my mate, who was very weak, but I couldn't, and, at last, he went down. Then, half unconscious, I was pounded up against the jagged rocks of the shore. I pulled myself up, slowly, resting at times, to safety."

Taylor was finally able to drag himself to the home of a fisherman. He was given kind-hearted care at the home of Captain Adam Firth. There he told his story.

Crowds of men from Shelburne and nearby points were searching along the beach today in the hope that perhaps one or two of the men with their lifebelts might have drifted ashore alive.

Dogs to match furs are being carried by some women in Paris.

ALGER'S "RAGS TO RICHES" OUTDONE IN REAL LIFE TODAY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—From "Rags to Riches" by Horatio Alger, was outdone in real life today.

It was a true story of big success—how a poor boy has risen from an obscure job to the uppermost position of the firm.

It was the story of George H. Jones. Jones, son of a poor carpenter, began his career with the Standard Oil company 35 years ago as a stenographer, at $60 a month. Today, he is chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, succeeding the late A. C. Bedford, and his salary is $125,000 a year.

Just as in the Alger story books, Jones worked hard and studied hard. He only had a grammar school education. But he made up for this by studying nights, holidays and on Sundays. He made himself invaluable to the company. He steadily mounted the ladder of success.

Now he's at the top.

Al Jolson Is Serious When He Is Drawn Into Rhinelander Case

Blackface Comedian Shows no Inclination Toward Conscious Entertainment as he Denies he Knows Quadroon Bride of Aristocrat.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Al Jolson, blackface comedian, was called to the witness stand today at the trial of the Rhinelander annullment action. The comedian became greatly excited during his testimony and showed no inclination toward conscious entertainment.

"Did you ever have any talk with the defendant,' asked Judge Mills, counsel for Rhinelander, pointing at Alice Jones Rhinelander, quadroon bride of the aristocratic plaintiff.

"Never in my life,' shouted Jolson. "Did you ever see her?"

"No," shouted Jolson, louder than before. "Can I talk in my own way?" pleaded the comedian excitedly.

Counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander broke in with:

"Well, Mr. Jolson, don't get excited. We don't claim you know her."

"Thank God for that," breathed Jolson, with the vibrating sob in his voice he is famous for. "That's fine. I can go home and make up with my wife. Those headlines upset me. I never been to Paul Smith's in my life. I've got hotel bills from Atlantic City, proving where I was."

"That's all right," said Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander, soothingly.

"Well, every time I go into my dressing room in the theater," related Jolson, confidentially, "some one plays 'Alice, where are thou going'."

"I hope I'll eat breakfast at home tomorrow," Jolson shouted as he left the witness stand.

The meteoric entrance and exit of Jolson into the case came from the casual mention of Jolson in letters written by Mrs. Rhinelander to Leonard in 1922. She wrote that while employed as a maid in Paul Smith's hotel in the Adirondacks she met and talked with Jolson to whom she referred as "being some flirt with the girls."

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Confused and stammering under the torture of a merciless cross-examination, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, admitted on the witness stand today that he had sworn to five falsehoods in the papers of his action to annul his marriage to Alice Beatrice Jones on the ground that she had concealed her Negro origin from him.

Rhinelander, gulping laborously under the questioning of Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander, also contradicted his testimony of a few minutes before and said he suspected two years before his marriage that Alice might have had Negro blood in her veins. He had declared previously the first intimation of his bride's color came from newspaper reports in 1924.

Letters to Editor

Municipal Courtroom.

East Liverpool, Nov. 17, 1925.

Editor Review-Tribune, East Liverpool, O.

Dear Sir—The suggestion that the assembly room in the Carnegie library be used for the new municipal court was received very favorably by local business men and attorneys.

The present city hall was built many years ago before the days of electric wiring or heating plants. It is a rickety, dilapidated structure and cannot be put in any sort of condition for much less than $3,000. The city has no money in its treasury available for this purpose.

The Carnegie library on the other hand is a fireproof building with a modern heating plant and properly wired for light. The city has already appropriated money for its upkeep. It will be heated and lighted regardless of whether it is used or not. At practically no expense the assembly room can be converted into a very modern up-to-date court room which will be a credit to the city.

Within a few months after the court is in operation it will be on more than a self sustaining basis. It will then probably be able to take over the heating and lighting and janitor service for the whole building. This will be a saving of about $1,000 to $1,200 available to the library trustees for the improvement of the book service.

It would seem to be improvident for the city to go to the expense of wasting the money in the improvement of city hall or of renting other rooms in the city which would not be fireproof and which would have fewer conveniences and with a greater overhead expense, than to use this part of the library, which otherwise would stand idle and be of no practical benefit to the city.

The court will not interfere with the book service of the library. On the contrary it will take many people into the building who have never been there before and will undoubtedly result in increased patronage. The new municipal court is a court of record. All of its proceedings will be orderly and treated with respect. The jail delivery or police court every morning will probably be held by the judge at the city hall.

The municipal court on account of its importance to the community should be properly housed in order that strangers as well as our own people should receive a good impression.

School Thrift Urged

at intervals to discuss thrift, while contests would be conducted to interest the children. The additional cost of conducting this system, to be paid by the depository, would be little more than is now necessary to operate the penny stamp savings system. The new plan would make less work for the teacher, who would not be required to handle stamps.

A committee consisting of Members Weaver and Ferguson and Superintendent McVay will meet with officials of the Potters' Savings and Loan company within the next few days to recommend that this system be adopted.

Seek Basketball Coach.

Upon recommendation of Superintendent McVay, the board approved a plan of allowing so-called "weak" teachers to spend one day in visiting other rooms in order to gather ideas from more efficient instructors regarding their work. Substitute teachers will be employed to take charge of such rooms while the regular instructor is visiting.

Proposed purchase of four new typewriters was deferred until the next meeting of the board in order to obtian bids from other manufacturers.

The clerk was instructed to notify the parents of two children from Madison township, attending the Glenmoor school, that they must pay the tuition fee or withdraw the pupils from the Liverpool district school. The Madison township board assert that the children reside in the Township line school district and that the Madison board will not pay for their tuition in the Glenmoor school.

The board discussed the employment of a high school basketball coach but left the matter in the hands of a committee consisting of Members Weaver and Wilhelm, and Superintendent McVay and Miss Florence Updegraff, high school principal. Superintendent McVay reported that both H. T. Lorah and Albert E. Reed, high school instructors, were experienced coaches. Lorah played with the University of Michigan team while in college, while Reed had experience at Circleville before coming to East Liverpool. O. V. Boone, director of physical education and football coach, has expressed his desire to be relieved of coaching the basketball team, feeling that he is not qualified to train a team in this line of sport. Miss Hazel Mast will coach the girl's team.

GLENMOOR HIT BY EPIDEMIC

Check Spread of Smallpox and Chickenpox in Suburb.

An epidemic of smallpox and chickenpox, which it is claimed developed in the vicinity of Glenmoor and Ross Meadows, along the Lincoln highway, three miles north of her, a few days ago, has been checked, according to an opinion by officials of the Columbiana county board of health today.

Nine cases of smallpox in three families and five scattering cases of chickenpox, most of them in mild form, are under quarantine. Approximately 60 children, attending the Glenmoore school, were dismissed yesterday upon instructions from county health officials. Most of them, however, were back in school today. About 25 of the children were advised to remain at home for a few days to await developments.

Seven members of the Wilkie Kinsey family—Mrs. Kinsey, the mother, and six children, five of them in school, are suffering from smallpox, according to Gomer Lewis, Lisbon, a representative of the county health board. Another case exists at the home of Wilbur Glenn, his son, Kenneth, 18, being ill. The other case is at the home of William McCartney, where a 15-year-old son is ill. The five cases of chickenpox are scattered in different homes of the district.

Lewis, accompanied by Miss Mary Masters, county health nurse, spent a greater part of Monday in the Glenmoor and Ross Meadow district examining the children who were dismissed from school. None of the youngsters in school showed symptoms of having contracted the disease, but in order to guard against a further spread, children suffering from sore throats and colds were instructed to remain in the house for a few days. The others were ordered to report for school this morning.

County health officials believe that the disease was brought to the city by members of the New Philadelphia football team, who played here a few weeks ago. Several cases of smallpox are said to have been in existence in the Tuscarawas county town for several months. Raymond Kinsey, one of the members of the Kinsey family, suffering from smallpox, is a member of the local high school grid team and played in the contest with New Philadelphia.

Local physicians are treating the patients. Dr. T. T. Church, Salem, county health commissioner, is out of the county and is not expected to return until the latter part of the week.

facts, except some slight evidence that two dresser drawers in the room where the child lay were ransacked."

Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, Allen said, he had left his apartment with Gardner to escort him to his room in another part of the hotel. He then drove his car, outside the hotel, to a garage and returned to his suite, where Mrs. Allen was awaiting him.

They decided to take a look at their baby, he said, and as soon as Mrs. Allen drew the blanket from off the child she screamed and fainted. He found the baby dead, he said.

Miss Caroline Frogren, the nurse, asleep in another room, was awakened by Mrs. Allen's screams and summoned the police. If burglars had entered the place, Captain Naughton said, they must have used a key, as the apartment door was not broken open.

But up to the present we have found the ant the most interestingly suggestive creature. He has developed and understands stirpiculture—the improvement of the race by careful breeding—which with us is as yet mere theory, and as we look down at the ant, we look up to him because the strangely active creature manages to do without sleep.

We human being drowse through 30 years of our three-score and ten, but the ant is awake and working all the time.

If the ant has managed to live without sleep, if he has acquired the faculty of lifelong wakefulness, why should we not do as much in time? We take it for granted that sleep is essential, as we take everything else for granted. We used to take it for granted that the earth was flat, but we have stopped that. Sleep was at one time forced upon man and other animals.

The aerth in its rollings turned away from the sun once in every 24 hours. In the darkness of the beginning man said to himself: "If I go walking around, I shall fall into a hole, so I shall lie down and wait until the sun comes again."

He did as all the animals did before him for millions of years. Since that time, man has conquered darkness. Why should he not ultimately conquer sleep?"

We know that thin men, nervous, highly organized do with far less sleep the n others. We know that old age requires less sleep than youth.

Can we not cultivate and develop the characteristics which make sleep less necessary? Higher races of apes have abolished tails. Can't we abolish sleep?

As old age needs less sleep than babyhood, so in our maturity as a human race we shall probably demand less sleep than now in our racial babyhood. Perhaps none at all will be needed.

If that happens our lives will be doubled in value, they will be complete. The hours of sunlight will be devoted to examination and admiration of nature's beauties on this earth.

The hours of darkness, given up to sleep no longer, will be devoted to the study of space to investigation among other worlds.

That kind of life will be worth while. Bear in mind that we shall only really begin to live on this earth when we shall have settled all the little social and material questions here and shall have begun in earnest the study of the universe in which we are a speck.

The days of the future will be given up to artistic enjoyment of the beautiful. The nights will be devoted to intellectual development and research.

Man will live.

Mitchell Witness Testifies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — While the lives of American aviators are constantly endangered by lack of adequate forecasts, the war department has refused to erect meteorological stations as a safeguard to the army's model airways, Lieut. Donald G. Duke, chief of army airways, testified today at the court-martial of Col William Mitchell.

Requests for radio weather stations at Cumberland, Md.; Uniontown, Pa.; Dallas, Texas, and Muskogee, Okla., were turned down, Duke said, on the ground there were "insufficient funds." The projects were demanded by the air service, he added, to meet an emergency and to prevent loss of life and property.

The war department's attitude, Duke said, provoked the army air service to describe the action as "economy practiced at the price of safety to lives and property."

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

FRANCE MECCA FOR LABORERS ON CONTINENT

Higher Pay and Plenty of Work are Magnets.

PARIS IS BUSY

Failure to Settle Debt Problem May Cause Reaction.

WASHINGTON.—Foreign laborers make up about 1,500,000 of the population of France, according to information obtained by the department of Commerce.

With most of the other nations of Europe, particularly Great Britain and Italy, in far from satisfactory economic position, France is becoming the great workhouse of the continent. Better wages, plenty of work and other factors are forming a great magnet to draw European labor to the French nation.

Contrasted with France's excellent domestic business prosperity, her government is far from the solvency which marks those of Great Britain and Italy, officials said. The latter countries have built up solid finances in the central government, by budget balancing and currency stabilization, while France, letting these governmental functions go into the discard, so far has established a business situation probably better than any other nation in Europe.

Forsee Reaction

Failure of the French debt negotiations in Washington so far have not affected France's economic position, but officials feel that not far in the future a definite reaction will start unless a funding agreement is reached with the United States and Great Britain.

Well-informed economists point out that French industry is already feeling the need of financing—that to continue in its present success and to compete in the world-wide trade war which is on in earnest, there must be currency stabilization, better credit ratings and balanced budgets in Paris.

"The influx of laborers into France from other European countries which has been in progress ever since the Armistice, continues unchecked," E. A. Masuret, of the Commercial Attache's office in Paris, has informed the department of Commerce.

"The total working population from other countries is about 1,500,000, most of whom came from Central Europe. In 1924 the total number admitted was 239,355, while 47,752 left France. Industrial laborers predominate as shown by the record of 197,196 in 1924, as against 42,189 agricultural workers.

Mostly Poles, Italians.

"The introduction of foreign industrial workers into France is authorized only when they have a labor contract which has been vised by the minister of Labor for industrial or by the minister of Agraculture for the farm workers, an investigation being made in each case as to whether the admission of these workers will prejudice employment among the native laboring population.'

Masuret says that there is employment for practically every available workman in France at the present time. This contrasts with over a million unemployed in Great Britain.

STATE BOUNDARY LINES AT FAULT

Errors Run From Hundreds of Acres to Many Square Miles.

Washington, D. C.—"Work recently begun to check up the condition of monuments marking the straight line boundary between New York and Pennsylvania, and to find how far the line varies from its proper position, brings to attention only one of the scores of 'boundary skeletons' in the national closet," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"It is probably safe to say that not one of the forty-eight states is now administering exactly the territory which supposedly belongs to it," continues the bulletin. "In some cases the differences are only matters of hundreds or thousands of acres, but in others they must be measured by hundreds of square miles. These faulty boundaries are for the most part accepted now, especially in the states longest settled; but the agreements have not all been reached quietly. There have been scores of disputes between neighboring states and territories, dozens of lawsuits have been brought before the Supreme court, and in one or two cases bitterness has been so great that civil war has seemed on the verge of breaking out.

"The chief difficulty is in drawing straight lines. Anyone can draw a straight line on a piece of paper. He can construct a reasonably straight edged flower bed or driveway. But try to lay out a straight line some miles or hundreds of miles long on the face of the earth, over hill and dale, valley and mountain, and you are faced by a vastly more difficult problem.

"Many of the supposedly east and west lines between the colonies, later inherited as boundaries by the states, were laid out with no other instrument than the magnetic compass. The direction in which the needle pointed varied as the surveyor advanced; but in some cases no account was taken of this, and in others inaccurate corrections were applied. The lines, instead of being straight and running in a true east and west direction, were traced somewhat like rail fences between their terminal points, or struck off from the true direction at an angle and had to be brought back at intervals by offsets.

Plumb Lines Cause Errors.

"Later when better instruments, astronomical methods, and higher mathematics were used the errors in running boundary lines were greatly reduced. An absolutely accurate line hundreds of miles long through rough country has never yet been marked out on the earth's surface, however, and probably never will be—chiefly because surveying instruments depend on plumb line or spirit level to establish perpendiculars, and these indicators vary with differences in density of the rocks from place to place. The closest approach to accuracy has been made by the 'triangulation system,' which the United States coast and geodetic survey has extended over a great part of the United States. Errors still crop up, but they are almost negligible. It is this triangulation system which has disclosed many of the rather glaring inaccuracies of the earlier boundary surveys.

"A number of boundary difficulties have arisen because of mistakes in geography. Thus the first boundary treaty between Great Britain and the United States in 1782 provided that the northern boundary of the United States should run from Lake of the Woods 'on a due west course to the river Mississippi'—a physical impossibility. This error had to be adjusted later but the tiny projection of United States territory into Canada at the 95th meridian—like the sight on a rifle barrel—is a monument to the mistake.

"Another error that led to trouble was the belief that an east-west line through the southern extremity of Lake Michigan would cut Lake Erie at or north of the latter's western end. The extension of Indiana and Ohio several miles north of this old east-west line testifies to the correction that had to be made. The shifting of the Ohio line north, incidentally, was one of the boundary matters that came near causing civil war. Militia from both Ohio and Michigan were mobilized near the disputed territory in 1835 and bloodshed was avoided by the narrowest margin.

"One of the most peculiar state boundaries in the United States is the northern line of Delaware, which is the arc of a circle nicked out of the southeastern corner of Pennsylvania. Laying out the Delaware boundaries was a rather difficult problem in geometry and surveying combined. While the north line is an arc of a circle drawn from the center of the town of Newcastle with a twelve mile radius, the west line is in the main a tangent to the circle from the midpoint of a base line in the south between the Atlantic ocean and Chesapeake bay.

Mason and Dixon Line.

"No boundary line is more famous than the 'Mason and Dixon line,' which divides the North and the South. It is the southern boundary of Pennsylvania and the northern boundary of Maryland. It takes its name from Jeremiah Mason and Charles Dixon, two famous mathematicians sent from England to survey the boundary. The line established by Mason and Dixon is probably more nearly accurate than any of the other east-west boundaries run in the eastern United States.

"In contrast to the Mason and Dixon line is the long east-west line forming the southern boundaries of Virginia and Kentucky between the Atlantic ocean and the Mississippi river. This line is supposed to lie along a parallel of latitude at 36 degrees 30 minutes north. The line as laid out is probably north of this parallel throughout practically its entire course. Where it cuts the Tennessee river it is about 20 miles too far north. At this point there is an offset to the south and the short stretch between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers is approximately on the theoretical parallel. The southern boundary of Tennessee is only less inaccurate than the northern. It dodges both north and south of its supposed location along the 35th parallel.

"North Carolina is among the states suffering the greatest losses on account of boundary errors. Its diagonal boundary with South Carolina is supposed to extend to the 35th parallel before turning west. It actually makes the turn 10 miles short of the goal, then jumps 12 miles north of the parallel and continues west. The net loss of territory to the state is estimated at between 500 and 1,000 square miles."

Conscience Money

Logansport, Ind.—B. H. Hudson, superintendent of the Logansport division of the Pennsylvania railroad here, has received $100 conscience money for the railroad company. The note attached to the money explained that the sender had kept the amount in his possession for years, but did not disclose the manner in which he had obtained it.

Resort to Caves

Tokyo.—Reports from Seoul, Korea, state that more than 3,000 residents of that place are dwelling in caves just as their ancestors did in a primitive age. It is believed that most of these cave-dwellers are members of the poverty-stricken, unemployed class.

In contrast to deficits shown in previous years, the state railways of Italy this year boast of a net income of $7,000,000.

It seems to us as though the management erred in not playing last Saturday's football game under the rules for water polo.—Marion Star.

CREEK INDIANS USED NO JAILS

Lash and Gun Constituted Only Penalties.

Okmulgee, Okla.—The ancient whipping tree and the old capitol of a vanished Indian nation still are doing service in this city.

In the heart of Okmulgee stands the council house of the Creek nation, erected in 1878. The Young Men's Christian association and the chamber of commerce have their headquarters in the building, and a bus line uses one corner for an office.

The building and its grounds occupy a block in the center of the business district. Among the numerous trees on the grounds are two where the executions and the legal whippings took place.

The Creeks had no jails. They had only two methods of punishment—whipping and shooting. The punishment for robbery, for instance, was 50 lashes for the first offense, 100 lashes for the second, and death for the third. In cases of execution, the condemned Indian was tied to the tree and shot.

Damage suits were settled in cash, work or 50 lashes on the bare back.

The council house is a two-story building of native sandstone. On the first floor were the departments of government; on the second, the legislative halls.

The Creeks were one of the five civilized tribes moved by the government from the southeastern part of the United States to this territory about 1830.

They established here a complete system of government, similar to the American republic, but with much simpler forms.

Their legislature was composed of the "house of kings" (senate) and the "house of warriors." The head of the state was the principal chief, elected for four years by a majority vote of the males of the nation. His assistant was the second chief elected in the same manner.

There was a high court and a district court, each district having a prosecuting attorney, a judge and a company of light horsemen, who were in the nature of mounted police.

The council house belongs to the city of Okmulgee. Efforts are now being made among the remaining Indians to move the building to a national Indian park planned near here.

Agricultural Outlook In Ohio Encouraging According to Reports

COLUMBUS—Ohio farmers are facing an era of prosperity.

That, briefly, is the United States government's summary of the agricultural outlook in the state.

C. J. West, federal crop statistician, from data compiled in all sections of the state, says that genreal conditions are somewhat better than last year.

Dairymen and live stock interests are also facing better prospects.

"A good corn crop in Ohio is always indicative of prosperity," West said. "The crop is good this year. This insures an abundant supply of feed. A big percentage of the corn crop is marketed through feeding on the farm, and as live stock prices are satisfactory, the corn thus used will bring dollars into the pockets of Ohio farmers."

West also pointed out that the big cotton crop in the south is beneficial to the live stock industry, as a plentiful supply of cottonseed meal will be available at moderate prices.

Although the early potato crop was somewhat less than in former years, the late supply is better and is bringing a higher price. This means that growers will recuperate their early losses on the late yield.

Potatoes are always a big item in the United States. When the national supply is less than 400,000,000 bushels the demand is big enough to push up prices. The supply this years is less than 350,000,000 bushels, which accounts for the present high price.

West predicted that potato prices would not fall below the present level and said that a gradual rise could be expected.

During an election at Ennis, Ireland, this fall, one ballot box was taken thirty miles to a polling place, guarded through the day, then was sealed and taken back to the courthouse to be opened and reveal that not a vote had been placed in it.

FOUR out of FIVE are caught

IT'S sheer carelessness to let pyorrhea cause trouble in your mouth. Yet your dentist knows that four out of five past forty, and many younger, suffer from this serious gum disorder.

It begins with tender bleeding gums. Soon the teeth loosen in their sockets and the poison spreads through the system, causing rheumatism, neuritis, and other similar diseases.

Forhan's for the Gums is the simple, easy way to keep you out of pyorrhea's clutches. It's a pleasant dentifrice that firms the gums and gives the teeth a thorough cleansing. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid which has been used by dentists for the last 15 years in the treatment of pyorrhea.

If used regularly and in time, Forhan's prevents or checks pyorrhea and so is an important safeguard to health. Begin today to use Forhan's night and morning as a wise precaution. All druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

Give Your Dentist a chance

Too many wait until an aching tooth forces them into the dentist's chair. It is folly to suffer this needless pain when all you have to do is to give your dentist a chance to prevent trouble in your mouth by visiting him at least twice a year for a thorough teeth and gum inspection.

Wesleyan and St. Xavier In Battle For Conference Title

BISHOPS ARE FAVORED TO DEFEAT MUSKETEERS

Win Would Give Delaware Combine First Claim in Ranking With no Tie Games to Mar Record; Cincinnatians and Oberlin, Both With Tie Games, Would Lead Race if Former is Victor.

By Stanley D. Koch.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—Having considerably more trouble than the famed hero of Pilgrim's Progress in his passage through temptations and doubts, and needing all the agility of an Aeneas in evading the Scyllas and Charybdi of football, St. Xavier's eleven is awaiting the answer of Saturday's battle with Ohio Wesleyan with anticipation and hope, the latter borne of desperation.

For on this game hinges the Saint's championship aspirations. With these two centers of gridiron and intellectual endeavor fighting it out, and Oberlin's championship claim filed and approved, the Ohio Conference 1925 football race is giving its last futile gasps. True, there still remain a few games carded for Thanksgiving day, but these will not affect the title.

An Ohio Wesleyan victory will give the battling bishops not only an undefeated record but the first claim in ranking in that Wesleyan has no tie games to mar its season run. Oberlin, on the other hand, was tied by Mt. Union. St. Xavier, too, has played an even-up match with Wittenberg, so that a win for the Musketeers will mean a definite tie with Oberlin, while a defeat gives the Wesleyan crew a clear claim in the ranking, despite the equal percentage with Oberlin.

And the Saints, despite the fact that they enter the final game at Cincinnati as the underdogs, are far from out of the race. There are several reasons. First, if there be any advantage in a home field, the St. Xavier eleven gets it. Second, its schedude has allowed it two weeks' rest while last week-end saw Wesleyan defeating Denison, and third, Wesleyan started the year at a reasonably high pitch against Ohio State and then had the Ohio and the Syracuse games toward which the team was pointed. St. Xavier was not considered necessarily a championship team early in the season, so it means that the battling Bishops will again have to be driven at a high pitch against so worthy an adversary.

The Saints, on the other hand, have worked up to this game with a slowly increasing effort and the Conference finale finds them at their highest pitch.

If the Cincinnati line can break up the charges of Wesleyan and the zone defense dissipate the constant passing threat, there is probably enough strength in the Saint attack to win. But Blickle must be stopped and Pearce, Turney et al, upset, to allow the Musketeers to top. This year's records, however, have shown that pre-game dope is only created to be disproved.

Cleveland's annual grudge — or on the 1925 basis—fudge fight take place when Case and Western Reserve hook up at the fifth city. Both teams have shown the strength of nonogenarians suffering from complete paralysis, but the annual clash brings up a stage of football created from rivalry that ranks with a pushball contest between college freshman and sophomores as a matter of inborn hate. Western Reserve, in accordance with the custom of years, probably will not lose, even if it doesn't win.

On Friday, Wittenberg and Ohio University meet at Athens, with the Lutherans favored to cop. Only at times, has Wittenberg shown flashes of the teamwork that the early season indicated, while Ohio, due to its remarkable showing against Cincinnati last week, partially redeemed its heretofore erratic play.

It will be a good game, but it's doubtful if the Green and White is strong enough for Wittenberg.

Kenyon vs. Akron at Akron should result in another Episcopalian triumph, for Coach Coleman's team is seemingly too weak to despoil the good record of the Gambier men. The backfield of the purple is powerful and the line is strong while Akron is more or less generally anemic.

After the Oberlin defeat, Coach Boles, of Wooster, foresaw a string of tragedies for his eleven. But the defeat by Ohio State was the only other loss sustained by the Black and Gold eleven, and with Saturday's game with Denison played at Wooster as the season's finale, it looks as if the Wooster eleven will end the season with an .833 percentage. The Big Red may upset the dope, but it will take all of Coach Livingston's skill to repel the attacks of Blough, Fox and Siskowic.

Mount Union, of course, is heavily favored over Hiram in the annual game at Hiram, and Muskingum carries the edge over Heidelberg when this pair meet at Tiffin.

England's New "Jimmy" Wilde

Ernie Jarvis.

This photo of Ernie Jarvis, British flyweight now in the United States, was taken while Ernie was falling for the Charleston. He is referred to as England's new Jimmy Wilde, but has some distance to go to prove his claim to the title.

TEX ASKS KEARNS TO "COME DOWN"

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Tex Rickard and others behind the Christmas fund show at the New Garden, Dec. 23, today are awaiting word from Jack Kearns as to the lowest quotation he would place upon the services of Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, as one of the principals in the feature bout. Tommy Milligan, of England, already has accepted terms for the match.

Rickard wired Kearns a final offer last night, asking him to moderate his demands in the name of charity. The welterweight title would go with the match.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—According to a re-check of the official standing, Eddie Tryon, of Colgate, and not Myles Lane, of Dartmouth, is the leading individual scorer in eastern football. Six school buildings to be erected in Canada to take the place of those burned, will cost more than $600,000.

BATTLE SHARON IN LAST GAME

Laughlin Favorite in Press League Tilt.

One step nearer the championship of the Pittsburgh Press Northwestern Division Soccer league as a result of their 3 to 1 victory over the Grove City Glencoe Thistles here Saturday, the Homer Laughlin club next Saturday will clash with Sharon in the final scheduled game of the circuit.

The engagement will be staged at Newell park and a victory as the result is confidently forecast by players and followers of the club.

The Laughlinns at present are tied with the Ellwood City Shelbys for the league lead and both teams probably will win this week's contests.

In that event, it is probable, according to Manager Shaw, that a post season game will be arranged between the Laughlins and the Shelbys for the championship of the circuit.

ANDERSON BEATS EUROPEAN CHAMP

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—If Europe was disposed to abide by results, Eddie Anerson, of Wyoming, today would be the featherweight champion of the continent. He defeated Edouard Mascart, European champion, in a 12-round bout last night, and defeated him so badly that the decision of a referee and two judges met with the unanimous approval of 4,500 customers, a rare occurrence locally.

However, the International federation only recognizes a change in the title when one European beats anothr, so the American must remain just plain Eddie Anderson.

Rayen May Lose Star

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 17.—Captain Harry Manushak, Rayen's star, may be lost for the annual battle on Thanksgiving with South. He suffered a badly sprained thigh in Saturday's game with Struthers.

PASADENA MAY HAVE TO BEG FOR NEW YEAR'S FOE

Hawley, Dartmouth Coach, Has Declared Against It; Illinois Means to Abide by Big Ten Conference Rules, Prohibiting Post Season Games; and Yale Refuses to be Considered.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—According to the good word from the tournament of roses officials at Pasadena, Dartmouth, Yale and Illinois are under consideration as possible opponents of Washington for the coast's annual post-season football game on New Year's day. Someone, apparently, has given the officials three guesses and the third time didn't prove it.

The writer's understanding is that none of the three teams mentioned have the slightest intention of playing a post-season football game. Jess Hawley, Dartmouth head coach, already has declared against it. Athletic heads at Illinois have gone on record to the effect that they mean to abide by the Big Ten conference rules, which declare postseason games taboo.

As for Yale, it has steadfastly declined to be a party to any such proceeding for some years back, and after viewing the 1925 outfit against Princeton, it is hardly likely that Yale will change its rather complex mind.

A bird in the hand, they say, is worth two in the bullrushes or something. Therefore, be it known to all men by these presents:

What, if anything, is the matter with the University of Alabama. The silence seems to be deafening.

There is absolutely nothing, or even less, the matter with the University of Alabama, and the writer has reason to believe that it would hearken to the slick city words of the coast promoters, if properly approached.

It is one of three unbeaten and untied elevens in the country, the other two being Dartmouth and Fordham. The latter, of course, lacks national significance and, therefore, is out like an ex-window.

Alabama doesn't lack national consequence. It doesn't lack anything. Any team that can run up 250 points against 7 for the combined opposition, a kindly term in this case, must have plenty.

It has, in fact, a great scoring machine, built around Pooley Hubert. It has, on its own recognizance, something of a defensive unit, built around Pooley Hubert. Pooley seems to be quite a young man. He made 18 of the first 20 tackles against Georgia Tech this year. Then turned around and gave the most remarkable exhibition of blocking and interfering seen in the south in many a season.

Pooley also runs, punts and forward passes in the immemorial manner, so dear to the heart of the college correspondent. They say he is a composite picture of all the great stars the south has known in 10 years.

That section is proud of Pooley and the Alabama team. It thinks Pasadena ought to know them better. It is the writer's idea that Pasadena could look further and do worse.

SHOOTS 276 IN DUCKPINS

William Kelly Turns Trick on Patterson Alleys.

Shooting 276 in duckpins is not being done seven nights out of the week.

It is not being done that many times in 365 nights; in fact, it is such an infrequent occurrence, especially in this section of the bowling belt that all the more credit goes to one William Kelly, of the East End, who toppled the maples at Patterson's alleys, in the East End, only recently, for exactly that score.

Officials of the Patterson alleys vouch for this performance.

It took place in a regular match. Kelly is said to have registered six straight strikes, nine out on the first ball in the next, and he then struck his way out.

Bishops Could Claim Gridiron Title on Comparative Scores

DELAWARE, Nov. 17.—Ohio Wesleyan's football team is 12 points better than Michigan, 15 points better than Illinois, 37 points better than Pennsylvania, 40 better than Yale, 60 better than the Army, 88 better than Notre Dame and 100 points better than Minnesota, only undefeated eleven in the Big Ten, on comparative scores figured out by fans here following the Battling Bishops' 3 to 3 tie with Syracuse.

"Forget that dope! You have to beat St. Xavier yet before you are even champions of the Ohio Conference,' said Coach George Gauthier here this week when he found some of his men busy with the comparative scores.

The best dope sheet prepared here yet however is the one arriving at the above scores which rivals the one of recent years in which Oberlin was found to be gridiron champion of the world. Syracuse, with Wesleyan tied, beat Indiana, 14-0. Indiana lost, 17-14, to Northwestern, which defeated Michigan, 3-2. Michigan defeated Illinois, 3-0, and Illinois walloped Pennsylvania, 24-2. Penn had a 16-13 win over Yale which defeated Army, 28-7. Army defeated Notre Dame, 27-0. Notre Dame defeated Minnesota, 18-7. By adding and subtracting according to wins and losses in the above scores the margin of superiority is figured.

By the same system Ohio Wesleyan would have the following margin on the following teams: Wisconsin 100, Iowa 106, Ohio State 121, Wooster 138, Mt. Union 140, Oberlin 140, Reserve 148, Kenyon 135, Transylvania 151, Miami 135.

Meanwhile Coach Gauthier and Ohio Wesleyan fans and players are wondering if they can beat the scrappy St. Xavier team and are making strenuous preparations for the contest.

During the first day of London's fall automobile show this year, orders were taken for 100,000 cars, valued at $100,000,000.

Expert Doubts Whether Red Grange Has Anything On Great Jim Thorpe

Indian Could Punt and Kick Goals, Something Illinois Halfback Has Failed to do.

By Norman E. Brown.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Grange or Thorpe?

The country seems to be pretty well divided as to which of the two is the greatest football player that ever graced the gridiron. It is a moot question.

Many of the critics who saw Grange run all over Pennsylvania immediately acclaimed him as the greatest of all time. The writer is pleased to doubt it. He doubts whether Grange has anything on the old Jim Thorpe as a ball-runner. He knows that Thorpe added to his all-around value by his punting and goal kicking, neither of which Grange happens to have in his repertoire.

Hard to Pick Best.

The writer, remembering Heston, of Michigan; Mahan, of Harvard, and Coye, of Yale, as a few examples also feels that the field has been narrowed down inordinately when only Grange and Thorpe are considered as the all highest. It seems to me that there have been too many wonderful football players for any man to pick the greatest without fear of contradiction.

However, the Grange versus Thorpe equation is interesting, if nothing else. It couples two ball-runners of a distinctly similar type. Neither, for example, is the will-'o-the-wisp type, the kind that Knute Rockne refers to as a "rabbit runner.'

Thorpe wasted no time with a lot of dodging and doubling. He pursued a straight line toward the goal as nearly as possible. So does Grange. In fact, the Illinois phantom follows the straight line a trifle more closely than Thorpe did.

This, to an open field runner, is a tacit comp'iment. It means deception without false motion, speed without haste, as it were. It means that Grange's dodging is achieved with a minimum of effort and, consequently, is all the more deceptive.

Keeps Feet in Mud.

One thing about Grange's running seems to have escaped the critics. He surprised nearly everybody by his ab'lity to hold his feet in a sea of soup against Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, Grange didn't even slip or skid momentarily on that occasion.

The answer is that, with all his speed and elusiveness, he puts his feet down more firmly than any ball-runner the writer has seen. To see him run is to visualize a man going through the motions of a rather hasty walk. There seems to be no conscious speed there, until you see some of the defenders try to catch him. Then you realize that at least one man on the field is moving in something of a hurry.

Was a Great Tackle.

Back in 1901 Fielding Yost, famous as a tackle at Ohio Northern University, University of West Virginia and Lafayette, took up his duties as coach at Ann Arbor. Michigan belonged to the Western Conference then, although it withdrew for a time later. During the first five years of Yost's reign, the Michigan team he developed won 15 of the 17 conference games played. They lost one and tied the other.

The very first team that took the field under Yost scored a total of 550 points for the season without being scored upon, a record never equaled before or since. Despite this wonderful record, Wisconsin claimed half the title because of the fact that it also had gone through the conference schedule undefeated.

Relented Next Year.

The following season Michigan scored 644 points and allowed the opposition but 12—a total of 1,194 points against 12 over a span of two campaigns.

The players on those teams?

Ask any old Michigan grad who they were and then prepare for an evening of reminiscences.

Dan McGugin.

All played a part in the team that came to be known as the "point-a-minute machine."

In 13 years in the western conference Yost's teams have scored a total of 875 points against its Big Ten rivals as compared to 279 points scored against the Wolverines.

Michigan has won 36 conference games, lost 11 and tied two.

When the Northwestern surprise was recorded, recently, Michigan had beaten Indiana 63 to 0, Wiscons'n 21 to 0 and Illinois 3 to 0. The result of the Northwestern game, 3 to 2 in that team's favor is well known.

These scores plus the 10-0 win over Ohio State, bring Michigan's total up to 964 points as against 281 for its opponents and the list of conference victories to 40 and defeats to 12.

A wonderful record this. And these conference scores do not relate all the glory that has been Michigan's.

Correct this sentence: "Our daughter is 16," said he, "and never has attempted to advise, or lecture, us."—Akron Beacon-Journal.

PIN BOY SCORES 205 IN DUCKPINS

A 14-year-old youngster today holds something of an edge on Liberty alley performers, in the matter of high scores, as a result of his performance last night.

Kiwanis Club Will Erect Signs Along All Main Highways

Members of the local Kiwanis club has made arrangements to erect attractive signs along the main highways leading into the city.

The public affairs committee, of which Charles Hendershot is chairman, has been instructed to order 10 enameled signs, which will bear the Kiwanis emblem and a word of welcome to tourists. These signs are to be erected on the Lincoln highway, Wellsville, Midland road and Calcutta roads and other highways at the city limits.

The club has also made arrangements to place the official Kiwanis magazine, a monthly, in the Carnegie library and also in the high school and Y. M. C. A. libraries as a means of advertising the activities of the organization.

The Belgian syndicate that won the contract to build and equip 210 miles of railways in Greece for $21,000,000 will also have charge of the financing of the project.

WEALTHY CHICAGOANS' BABY IS MURDERED

TODAY

Shall We Do Without Sleep?

Apes Abolish Tails.

Study the Ant.

Old Age and Babyhood.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

A half-developed being like man, hanging midway between primitive barberism and ultimate perfection, should study the insect tribes which appear to have realized the possibilities of development in their line.

The study of the ant and the bee, the spider and the scorpion should fill us with hope. We should say to ourselves:

"If these tiny fragments of life can develop so highly, what may not we hope for in the way of ultimate possibilities? Our beginning is so much more full of promise than the beginnings of our tiny insect brothers."

This writer, taking his own advice, which is most unusual, has been trying to get acquainted with some insects in the hope of cheering himself and getting new ideas.

From the female scorpion we acquire fresh veneration for the possibilities of maternal devotion.

The mother of the Gracchi has been well advertised because she preferred her sons to jewelry. The Russian mother who feeds herself to the wolves, instead of throwing her boy over the back of the sleigh in the usual way, is also highly praised. But their devotion shrinks to nothing when compared with that of any poor [illegible] Mexico's sandy [illegible] scorpions ar- [illegible] back, half a [illegible] or them or more. She moves about with them, protecting them, avoiding danger, giving them the sunlight. Meanwhile they are feeding on her body. Her movements get gradually slower and slower, fina[illegible] cease. The young scorpions depart, leaving the mother scorpion simply an empty shell. We should dislike to see any such exhibition of tenderness among human beings, but we can't help admiring the scorpion.

Spiders, who construct tiny balloons with little cars all complete, are wonderful creatures. They cross chasms in their balloons, throwing out bits of trailing web which seem to act as rudders. In their little way and in a perfectly adequate fashion they have solved aerial navigation, which still puzzles us. We admire spiders and kill only those with yellow stomachs, which are poison.

CHILD IS SMOTHERED IN BED; CHLOROFORM USED, POLICE SUSPECT

Bottle of Ethereal Liquid and Cloth Steeped in it Discovered Near Body of Infant Son of John R. Allen in Their Apartment in Fashionable Hotel in Illinois Metropolis.

DETECTIVES CALLED BY HUSBAND FIND TOT'S MOTHER UNCONSCIOUS

Authorities, After Investigation, Claim Facts do Not Support Theory Suggested by Friends of Family That Burglars Had Killed Child With Blankets to Stifle His Cries.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 17.—With the discovery at dawn today of a bottle of chloroform and a cloth steeped in the liquid under the bed where the body of John Allen, Jr., 6 weeks' old, lay, Police Captain John I. Naughton announced he had found evidence pointing to murder.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Allen, wealthy Chicagoans, the parents, told the police they found the child smothered to death with a blanket drawn over his face, when they went into his room shortly after midnight. They said they had been entertaining friends in another part of their suite in the Belmont [illegible].

When detectives summoned by Allen arrived they found his wife unconscious. The husband said she had fainted when they discovered the baby was dead.

Allen is a member of the firm of Stackhouse and Allen, dealers in electrical and radio supplies. The Allens have a three-room suite in the hotel, a fashionable North Side hostelry. Up until within an hour of the time the baby was found dead, Mr. Allen said he had been entertaining Lawrence Gardner, president of the Garod company, a radio receiver firm.

Dresser Drawers Ransacked

When Captain Naughton and detectives first arrived at the Allen apartment friends of the family suggested that burglars had smothered the child with a blanket to stiffle its cries. It was not until some hours later that police found the chloroform and the cloth, they said.

Captain Naughton declared that the burglar trend was "not supported by

Kicks Wife's Shin In Bridge Game; No Divorce Cause

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—A husband may kick his wife's shins when she raises his bid at bridge, without furnishing grounds for divorce, it had been judicially determined today.

However, in the case of Mrs. Vira M. Schuman, suing Henry L. Schuman, Judge Samuel E. Kramer found other facts warranted the decree which was granted.

Mrs. Schuman testified that on the occasion of the "shin kicking" she raised her husband's bids, and he was set.

"Ofttimes there is plenty of provocation for losing one's temper on such occasions," the court observed.

COURT ORDERS ATTORNEY FOR LANSDOWNE'S WIDOW EJECTED

Uproar Occurs at Shenandoah Disaster Inquiry.

WOMAN ON STAND

Witnesses Not Allowed to Have Civilian Counsel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — An uproar was caused today at the resumption of the Shenandoah naval court of inquiry, when, by order of the gold-braided officers constituting the court, Joseph Davies, attorney for Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of the dirigible commander, was forcibly ejected from the hearing room.

An orderly acted as bouncer after Davies had "demanded to be allowed to represent" the Shenandoah commander's widow.

Mrs. Lansdowne herself was in the witness chair when the incident occurred.

Marine Is Bouncer.

When Mrs. Lansdowne, in her widow's weeds, took the witness stand, Davies, a well known Washington lawyer, and ex-member of the federal trade commission, stepped up to the back of her chair.

"May it please the court," he said, "I am here to represent Mrs. Lansdowne."

The court informed Davies that witnesses were allowed to have no civilian counsel.

Davies objected to any such ruling, and a wrangle of words followed, with the lawyers and the members of the court shouting at each other. He refused to leave, and the court instructed the orderly to put him out. It was done by a husky marine.

A portion of the audience broke into applause when the orderly escorted Davies from the room.

"Hold me for contempt and send me to jail but in fairness and decency I demand to be heard," shouted Davies.

Judge Advocate Cites Opinions.

Major Henry Leonard, judge advocate, told the court he had been advised that Davies would try to appear as Mrs. Lansdowne's attorney.

"I have prepared for it," Leonard added, after a marine orderly had ejected Davies.

Troops Thrown About Jail to Prevent Negro's Lynching

Centreville, Md., Mob Demands Life of Alleged Assailant of Farmer's 4 Year-Old Daughter.

CENTREVILLE, Md., Nov. 17. — A company of state troops was rushed here early today and thrown about the jail to prevent the lynching of Joshua Tiller, Negro, who is charged with assault on a four-year-old girl, daughter of a farmer near Millington.

The troops were called for after a mob of 300 persons had stormed the jail around midnight. They gained entrance over the protests of Sheriff Seward, but were unable to get to the cell occupied by the Negro because of steel doors. The sheriff had hidden the keys.

Several shots were fired in the mob's assault on the jail, but no one was injured.

Public indignation has been running high against the Negro since he was arrested. It reached the white heat late last night.

Sheriff Seward pleaded with the ringleaders to disperse and let the law take its course, but they refused, and it was only after inability to reach the prisoner that the crowd left, vowing to return. Sheriff Seward called Gov. Ritchie and the troops were dispatched.

TOLEDO POLICE SCOUR CITY FOR 'CLUB KILLER' WHOSE FOURTH VICTIM FLEES

Mysterious Giant, Blamed for Slaying Two Women and Injuring Third, Attempts to Murder Telephone Operator.

TOLEDO, Nov. 17.—Police were scouring the city today, in search of a person, believed to be responsible for clubbing two women to death, and the serious injury to a third.

The "club killer," after four weeks, became active again last night and attempted to kill Wilma Hoadley, 25, telephone operator, as she was walking along 20th street.

Miss Hoadley said a giant stepped from behind a tree and swung a club at her. The first blow ripped a gaping hole in her head. She dodged and the second touched her only slightly.

An automobile with glaring lights turned a corner and the club wielder fled.

Other victims of the "club killer" were Mrs. Emma Hatfield, attacked May 24, died September 9; Mrs. Lydia Baumgartner, found murdered August 21; Mrs. Frank Hall, severely injured walking along a street October 20.

BOARD OF EDUCATION URGES THRIFT IN SCHOOLS; ADOPTS SAVINGS PLAN

Penny System, Under Which From $600 to $1,500 Monthly Was Banked in Past Years, is Approved.

The board of education, meeting in the high school building last evening, went on record in favor of teaching thrift in the schools, when it approved a school savings system, operated by the Standard Savings Service of Pittsburgh.

A so-called penny savings system has been operated in the schools for several years under the direction of the Potters' Savings and Loan company. According to reports on file in the office of the superintendent, children bank from $600 to $1,500 monthly through the purchase of penny stamps which are sold through the teachers.

A representative of the Pittsburgh savings service appeared before the board last night to explain a plan which he declared was being operated in more than 200 cities in the tri-state district. He asserted that school children of East Liverpool should bank between $4,000 and $5,000 monthly through their system, which teaches the advantages of thrift. He explained that a local bank or loan institution would act as a depository and pay interest on all deposits of $1 or more. Speakers would be sent to the schools

LONDON, Nov. 17.—"The brain doesn't see, hear or feel, nor does it plan, hope or love," Sir Oliver Lodge, eminent British scientist declared in a lecture here.

ONE SAVED AS SQUALL UPSETS SMALL SAILBOAT IN RAGING SEA

CREW OF CUTTER

Lone Survivor Thinks Ninth Man Also Lost Life.

SHELBURNE, Nova Scotia, Nov. 17.—How eight United States sailors—possibly nine—were tossed to death in a raging sea when caught in a squall in a small sailboat in the waters of Shelburne harbor was related in a gripping manner today by Charles Taylor, 19, of Bay City, Mich., the lone survivor.

Taylor said the victims were returning to their ship, the United States coast guard cutter Morrill, after they had dinner in Shelburne last evening. Their boat was caught in a storm and capsized.

Cling To Boat for Hours.

For hours, the sailors clung to the little boat, within the sight of the twinkling lights of Shelburne, until finally they gave up, one by one, and sank to the bottom of the water.

The dead, as far as Taylor could give them, were:

WARRANT PAYMASTER KINGSBURY, 28 years old.

I. J. BRACKETT, coxswain, 25 years old.

——— SAULISACK, first class seaman, 22 years old.

H. K. WILSON (colored), cabin steward, 24 years old.

H. H. McMURDO, chief yeoman, 25 years old.

HERE IS FIRST CHAPTER OF REVIEW-TRIBUNE'S SMASHING SERIAL, "METHUSELAH'S WIFE," STORY OF GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY! READ IT!

By EDGAR POE NORRIS.

ONE.

Mrs. Gus Long and Mrs. Bob Roester were acquainted with all the gossip of Central City. What they did not acquire from direct observation, they learned through the delivery boys and ice man, or over the clothes-lines in the backyard from their more aristocratic neighbors' servants. Neither of these women were blessed with offspring; neither of them boasted any social connections. They had, however, each other. They were sufficient unto themselves. For nine years, ever since Mrs. Long, wife of a painter, moved into the other half of the double house owned by Mrs. Roester, helpmeet of a barber, these two had spent from two to six hours in each other's company, dealing out destinies in voices that were not always discreetly smothered.

The double house in which they lived was situated midway up that two-block strip of Washington street that rises abruptly from Main street to High avenue and establishes class consciousness in Central City. For this middle western city of 35,000 is situated at the foot and the top of a sheer hill, with Washington street as the neck of the figure eight its boundaries describe. When Central City outgrew the plateau upon which it was founded, it had to expand upward, and blasted Washington street out of shale to do it.

In the lower section, of course, is the business district Main street, and stretching away from it, like sore fingers on a dirty hand, the thoroughfares where live the workers in the plants of the National Axle and Bearing company, and the Tornado Fence company, the two industries which differentiate Central City from the other towns of its size in the state that are dependent for prosperity upon the favor of those who till the soil. Central City bustles under the smoke-haze that permits a comprehensive bird's eye view of the whole of the town only one day a week. It has an air of its own, literally and figuratively speaking.

In the upper division of that figure eight live the persons who do not fish for their livings in their sweat and who, consequently, "matter." Those who reside on these Olympian heights daily pass in review before Mrs. Gus Long and Mrs. Bob Roester, as the pair sit, Argus-eyed and serene, on the porch of the double house that clutches at the hillside.

Darkness had poured down the hill and engulfed all Central City except Main street's brilliant "White Way" when Mrs. Gus Long issued from her half of the house, and sat down in the squeaky porch swing, lightly humming. Her ear was tuned to hear anything that might escape the screen of the Roester side of the house. After a strained silence her ears caught the sound of feet upon a carpeted floor. Mrs. Roester was coming out.

"Cool enough for a wrap, Belle?"

"I guess I'd better wear my shawl."

The screen door slashed. Mrs. Bob Roester had failed again to keep Mrs. Gus Long from wearing the shawl, grand extravagance of a drunken husband, that she loved so much to show off.

"Bob's gone up to cut Noble Harwood's hair," she announced proudly.

"Goin' back in the mornin' to shave him."

"I'd think he'd have both done at thuh same time," Mrs. Long remarked.

"Too nervous. Bob always barbers him, you know, and he says Noble Harwood just fidgets in thuh chair somethin' awful when he's gettin' a haircut. Ain't so bad when it's a shave."

"Needs all his nerve t'morrer," Mrs. Long cackled, inducing a similar demonstration from her neighbor. "Juh read in thuh paper thur description of her gown?"

"Yes, pearls an' everythin.' I bet he paid for it."

"Course he did."

"Wonder what he's marrin' her for?"

"What does any old man marry a young girl like that for?"

Mrs. Roester did not reflect on the matter. "Well, he ain't so old. Fifty-two, thuh paper says. An' she's twenty."

They were silent for a minute as their eyes followed a limousine swiftly ascending the hill.

"I'll bet that somebody goin' up now—rehearsal or somethin' tonight, Bob said. He thought he might get to see it when he gets through barberin' Mr. Harwood. He thought Mr. Harwood might invite him. He expects Mr. Harwood will give him five dollars, or ten dollars. He wouldn't have went at night, except for that. Bob likes his evenin's."

"So does Gus. Lodge tonight. He's got a good chance of bein' Eminent Clarion next time they 'lect."

Mrs. Long was pursuing her own thoughts: "I'll bet her mother's a happy woman tonight."

TODAY

Shall We Do Without Sleep?

Apes Abolish Tails.

Study the Ant.

Old Age and Babyhood.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

A half-developed being like man, hanging midway between primitive barberism and ultimate perfection, should study the insect tribes which appear to have realized the possibilities of development in their line.

The study of the ant and the bee, the spider and the scorpion should fill us with hope. We should say to ourselves:

"If these tiny fragments of life can develop so highly, what may not we hope for in the way of ultimate possibilities? Our beginning is so much more full of promise than the beginnings of our tiny insect brothers."

This writer, taking his own advice, which is most unusual, has been trying to get acquainted with some insects in the hope of cheering himself and getting new ideas.

From the female scorpion we acquire fresh veneration for the possibilities of maternal devotion.

The mother of the Gracchi has been well advertised because she preferred her sons to jewelry. The Russian mother who feeds herself to the wolves, instead of throwing her boy over the back of the sleigh in the usual way, is also highly praised. But their devotion shrinks to nothing when compared with that of any poor [illegible] Mexico's sandy [illegible] scorpions ar- [illegible] back, half a [illegible] or them or more. She moves about with them, protecting them, avoiding danger, giving them the sunlight. Meanwhile they are feeding on her body. Her movements get gradually slower and slower, finally cease. The young scorpions depart, leaving the mother scorpion simply an empty shell. We should dislike to see any such exhibition of tenderness among human beings, but we can't help admiring the scorpion.

Spiders, who construct tiny balloons with little cars all complete, are wonderful creatures. They cross chasms in their balloons, throwing out bits of trailing web which seem to act as rudders. In their little way and in a perfectly adequate fashion they have solved aerial navigation, which still puzzles us. We admire spiders and kill only those with yellow stomachs, which are poison.

CHILD IS SMOTHERED IN BED; CHLOROFORM USED, POLICE SUSPECT

Bottle of Ethereal Liquid and Cloth Steeped in it Discovered Near Body of Infant Son of John R. Allen in Their Apartment in Fashionable Hotel in Illinois Metropolis.

DETECTIVES CALLED BY HUSBAND FIND TOT'S MOTHER UNCONSCIOUS

Authorities, After Investigation, Claim Facts do Not Support Theory Suggested by Friends of Family That Burglars Had Killed Child With Blankets to Stifle His Cries.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 17.—With the discovery at dawn today of a bottle of chloroform and a cloth steeped in the liquid under the bed where the body of John Allen, Jr., 6 weeks' old, lay, Police Captain John I. Naughton announced he had found evidence pointing to murder.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Allen, wealthy Chicagoans, the parents, told the police they found the child smothered to death with a blanket drawn over his face, when they went into his room shortly after midnight. They said they had been entertaining friends in another part of their suite in the Belmont hotel.

When detectives summoned by Allen arrived they found his wife unconscious. The husband said she had fainted when they discovered the baby was dead.

Allen is a member of the firm of Stackhouse and Allen, dealers in electrical and radio supplies. The Allens have a three-room suite in the hotel, a fashionable North Side hostelry. Up until within an hour of the time the baby was found dead, Mr. Allen said he had been entertaining Lawrence Gardner, president of the Garod company, a radio receiver firm.

Dresser Drawers Ransacked

When Captain Naughton and detectives first arrived at the Allen apartment friends of the family suggested that burglars had smothered the child with a blanket to stiffle its cries. It was not until some hours later that police found the chloroform and the cloth, they said.

Captain Naughton declared that the burglar trend was "not supported by

Kicks Wife's Shin In Bridge Game; No Divorce Cause

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—A husband may kick his wife's shins when she raises his bid at bridge, without furnishing grounds for divorce, it had been judicially determined today.

However, in the case of Mrs. Vira M. Schuman, suing Henry L. Schuman, Judge Samuel E. Kramer found other facts warranted the decree which was granted.

Mrs. Schuman testified that on the occasion of the "shin kicking" she raised her husband's bids, and he was set.

"Ofttimes there is plenty of provocation for losing one's temper on such occasions," the court observed.

COURT ORDERS ATTORNEY FOR LANSDOWNE'S WIDOW EJECTED

Uproar Occurs at Shenandoah Disaster Inquiry.

WOMAN ON STAND

Witnesses Not Allowed to Have Civilian Counsel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — An uproar was caused today at the resumption of the Shenandoah naval court of inquiry, when, by order of the gold-braided officers constituting the court, Joseph Davies, attorney for Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of the dirigible commander, was forcibly ejected from the hearing room.

An orderly acted as bouncer after Davies had "demanded to be allowed to represent" the Shenandoah commander's widow.

Mrs. Lansdowne herself was in the witness chair when the incident occurred.

Marine Is Bouncer.

When Mrs. Lansdowne, in her widow's weeds, took the witness stand, Davies, a well known Washington lawyer, and ex-member of the federal trade commission, stepped up to the back of her chair.

"May it please the court," he said, "I am here to represent Mrs. Lansdowne."

The court informed Davies that witnesses were allowed to have no civilian counsel.

Davies objected to any such ruling, and a wrangle of words followed, with the lawyers and the members of the court shouting at each other. He refused to leave, and the court instructed the orderly to put him out. It was done by a husky marine.

A portion of the audience broke into applause when the orderly escorted Davies from the room.

"Hold me for contempt and send me to jail but in fairness and decency I demand to be heard," shouted Davies.

Judge Advocate Cites Opinions.

Major Henry Leonard, judge advocate, told the court he had been advised that Davies would try to appear as Mrs. Lansdowne's attorney.

"I have prepared for it," Leonard added, after a marine orderly had ejected Davies.

Troops Thrown About Jail to Prevent Negro's Lynching

Centreville, Md., Mob Demands Life of Alleged Assailant of Farmer's 4 Year-Old Daughter.

CENTREVILLE, Md., Nov. 17. — A company of state troops was rushed here early today and thrown about the jail to prevent the lynching of Joshua Tiller, Negro, who is charged with assault on a four-year-old girl, daughter of a farmer near Millington.

The troops were called for after a mob of 300 persons had stormed the jail around midnight. They gained entrance over the protests of Sheriff Seward, but were unable to get to the cell occupied by the Negro because of steel doors. The sheriff had hidden the keys.

Several shots were fired in the mob's assault on the jail, but no one was injured.

Public indignation has been running high against the Negro since he was arrested. It reached the white heat late last night.

Sheriff Seward pleaded with the ringleaders to disperse and let the law take its course, but they refused, and it was only after inability to reach the prisoner that the crowd left, vowing to return. Sheriff Seward called Gov. Ritchie and the troops were dispatched.

TOLEDO POLICE SCOUR CITY FOR 'CLUB KILLER' WHOSE FOURTH VICTIM FLEES

Mysterious Giant, Blamed for Slaying Two Women and Injuring Third, Attempts to Murder Telephone Operator.

TOLEDO, Nov. 17.—Police were scouring the city today, in search of a person, believed to be responsible for clubbing two women to death, and the serious injury to a third.

The "club killer," after four weeks, became active again last night and attempted to kill Wilma Hoadley, 25, telephone operator, as she was walking along 20th street.

Miss Hoadley said a giant stepped from behind a tree and swung a club at her. The first blow ripped a gaping hole in her head. She dodged and the second touched her only slightly.

An automobile with glaring lights turned a corner and the club wielder fled.

Other victims of the "club killer" were Mrs. Emma Hatfield, attacked May 24, died September 9; Mrs. Lydia Baumgartner, found murdered August 21; Mrs. Frank Hall, severely injured walking along a street October 20.

BOARD OF EDUCATION URGES THRIFT IN SCHOOLS; ADOPTS SAVINGS PLAN

Penny System, Under Which From $600 to $1,500 Monthly Was Banked in Past Years, is Approved.

The board of education, meeting in the high school building last evening, went on record in favor of teaching thrift in the schools, when it approved a school savings system, operated by the Standard Savings Service of Pittsburgh.

A so-called penny savings system has been operated in the schools for several years under the direction of the Potters' Savings and Loan company. According to reports on file in the office of the superintendent, children bank from $600 to $1,500 monthly through the purchase of penny stamps which are sold through the teachers.

A representative of the Pittsburgh savings service appeared before the board last night to explain a plan which he declared was being operated in more than 200 cities in the tri-state district. He asserted that school children of East Liverpool should bank between $4,000 and $5,000 monthly through their system, which teaches the advantages of thrift. He explained that a local bank or loan institution would act as a depository and pay interest on all deposits of $1 or more. Speakers would be sent to the schools

Victims Die in Water Near Shelburne, Nova Scotia.

CREW OF CUTTER

Lone Survivor Thinks Ninth Man Also Lost Life.

SHELBURNE, Nova Scotia, Nov. 17.—How eight United States sailors—possibly nine—were tossed to death in a raging sea when caught in a squall in a small sailboat in the waters of Shelburne harbor was related in a gripping manner today by Charles Taylor, 19, of Bay City, Mich., the lone survivor.

Taylor said the victims were returning to their ship, the United States coast guard cutter Morrill, after they had dinner in Shelburne last evening. Their boat was caught in a storm and capsized.

Cling To Boat for Hours.

For hours, the sailors clung to the little boat, within the sight of the twinkling lights of Shelburne, until finally they gave up, one by one, and sank to the bottom of the water.

The dead, as far as Taylor could give them, were:

WARRANT PAYMASTER KINGSBURY, 28 years old.

I. J. BRACKETT, coxswain, 25 years old.

——— SAULISACK, first class seaman, 22 years old.

ONE.

Mrs. Gus Long and Mrs. Bob Roester were acquainted with all the gossip of Central City. What they did not acquire from direct observation, they learned through the delivery boys and ice man, or over the clothes-lines in the backyard from their more aristocratic neighbors' servants. Neither of these women were blessed with offspring; neither of them boasted any social connections. They had, however, each other. They were sufficient unto themselves. For nine years, ever since Mrs. Long, wife of a painter, moved into the other half of the double house owned by Mrs. Roester, helpmeet of a barber, these two had spent from two to six hours in each other's company, dealing out destinies in voices that were not always discreetly smothered.

The double house in which they lived was situated midway up that two-block strip of Washington street that rises abruptly from Main street to High avenue and establishes class consciousness in Central City. For this middle western city of 35,000 is situated at the foot and the top of a sheer hill, with Washington street as the neck of the figure eight its boundaries describe. When Central City outgrew the plateau upon which it was founded, it had to expand upward, and blasted Washington street out of shale to do it.

In the lower section, of course, is the business district Main street, and stretching away from it, like sore fingers on a dirty hand, the thoroughfares where live the workers in the plants of the National Axle and Bearing company, and the Tornado Fence company, the two industries which differentiate Central City from the other towns of its size in the state that are dependent for prosperity upon the favor of those who till the soil. Central City bustles under the smoke-haze that permits a comprehensive bird's eye view of the whole of the town only one day a week. It has an air of its own, literally and figuratively speaking.

In the upper division of that figure eight live the persons who do not fish for their livings in their sweat and who, consequently, "matter." Those who reside on these Olympian heights daily pass in review before Mrs. Gus Long and Mrs. Bob Roester, as the pair sit, Argus-eyed and serene, on the porch of the double house that clutches at the hillside.

Darkness had poured down the hill and engulfed all Central City except Main street's brilliant "White Way" when Mrs. Gus Long issued from her half of the house, and sat down in the squeaky porch swing, lightly humming. Her ear was tuned to hear anything that might escape the screen of the Roester side of the house. After a strained silence her ears caught the sound of feet upon a carpeted floor. Mrs. Roester was coming out.

"Cool enough for a wrap, Belle?"

"I guess I'd better wear my shawl."

The screen door slashed. Mrs. Bob Roester had failed again to keep Mrs. Gus Long from wearing the shawl, grand extravagance of a drunken husband, that she loved so much to show off.

"Bob's gone up to cut Noble Harwood's hair," she announced proudly.

"Goin' back in the mornin' to shave him."

"I'd think he'd have both done at thuh same time," Mrs. Long remarked.

"Too nervous. Bob always barbers him, you know, and he says Noble Harwood just fidgets in thuh chair somethin' awful when he's gettin' a haircut. Ain't so bad when it's a shave."

"Needs all his nerve t'morrer," Mrs. Long cackled, inducing a similar demonstration from her neighbor. "Juh read in thuh paper thur description of her gown?"

"Yes, pearls an' everythin.' I bet he paid for it."

"Course he did."

"Wonder what he's marrin' her for?"

"What does any old man marry a young girl like that for?"

Mrs. Roester did not reflect on the matter. "Well, he ain't so old. Fifty-two, thuh paper says. An' she's twenty."

They were silent for a minute as their eyes followed a limousine swiftly ascending the hill.

"I'll bet that somebody goin' up now—rehearsal or somethin' tonight, Bob said. He thought he might get to see it when he gets through barberin' Mr. Harwood. He thought Mr. Harwood might invite him. He expects Mr. Harwood will give him five dollars, or ten dollars. He wouldn't have went at night, except for that. Bob likes his evenin's."

"So does Gus. Lodge tonight. He's got a good chance of bein' Eminent Clarion next time they 'lect."

"Bob gets five dollars for shavin' dead people, and I told him I thought he ought to get that much when it's a weddin'. He said he thought Old Harwood would give him at least five dollars, and maybe ten. Mr. Harwood always gives him a tip—a quarter or half dollar, usually, but this is a weddin'."

SALINEVILLE ROAD FINISHED

Last of Concrete Poured Yesterday Afternoon.

Contractors poured the last of the concrete on the new highway yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, completing the road work.

It is expected that the new thoroughfare will be thrown open to traffic around December 7.

There is still approximately six-tenths of a mile of the road in Salineville that is unimproved, but this road is being coated with cinders at the present time, and, consequently, will be in good condition for travel throughout the winter after the entire road is placed in use.

Arthur Brisbane Lauds Photoplay at Ceramic Theatre.

The growing influence of motion pictures in educational work seems to have been exemplified in "The Iron Horse," a William Fox production based on the building of the first transcontinental rails, which was shown last night at the Ceramic theatre.

Such a picture, writes Arthur Brisbane, of Hearst's American, will do more to Americanize foreigners than any number of dreary sermons on the Constitution, and 100 per cent Americanism."

Mr. Brisbane goes on to say that "to see Lincoln walking in the White House corridors, to see live bison actually pursued by live Indians, and men laying the Union Pacific tracks under the fire of bows and arrows, is real education."

F. W. Mordaunt Hall, in The New York Times, remarks that "this is an instructive and inspiring film, one which should make every American proud of the manner of men who are responsible for great achievements in the face of danger."

The New York reviewers appeared to be unanimous in their judgment of the picture as an educational medium. "It is almost impossible to imagine any American seeing this picture play and failing to respond to its emotional appeal," wrote Quinn Martin, of The New York World. "Every steel spike seems to be driven with a tug at the audience's heart."

"A celebration, proud, loud and picturesque of the great American Odyssey,' says Gilbert W. Gabriel, of The Telegram and Evening Mail, while The Sun frankly announced that "it is one of the few films which this department can unhesitatingly recommend."

Alison Smith, in The Evening World, boldly asserted that "The Iron Horse" presents "the most truly dramatic sequence of scenes that the screen has caught for many seasons," while H. T. Torres, of The New York Commercial, says: "A great motion picture, a credit to the American picture industry."

In The Journal of Commerce, Edward E. Pidgeon writes that it is "a romantic and spectacular picture and one that for sincerity and detail, magnificence of background and convincing action, is in a class by itself."

"The Iron Horse' tells the story of the union of the railroads completing the link which bound the east and west in 1869. Scenes show the Union Pacific and Central Pacific engines meeting at Promontory Point, Utah, and others depict the life of the rail builders on the prairies. John Ford was the director, and the leading roles were played by George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy. The picture played for a year at the Lyric theatre, in New York City.

His condition today was said to be practically unchanged.

PRESS COMMENT ON WILL ROGERS

Humorist and De Reszke Singers Score Successes.

Here are critics' comments on Will Rogers and the De Reszke singers, who come to the Ceramic theatre next Monday, Nov. 23.

"Rogers is superb. He is tremendous, a magnificent success. He surpassed all my expectations."—Wm. G. Frizell, Dayton.

"Rogers and the De Reszke Singers the greatest concert attraction ever to play Cleveland. Unanimous opinion. Its the three ring circus of the concert world. De Reszke Singers prove as big a hit as Rogers. (Telegram)—Ralph D. Smith, Cleveland, Ohio.

"Will Rogers whirlwind success. In this home state people came from far and near. De Reszke Singers greatest quartette in the world. Greatest attraction ever to play Tulsa. Capacity house, hundreds turned away. Congratulate you on your usual clever vision."—Robert Boice Carson, Tulsa, Okla.

"The program given by Will Rogers and the De Reszke Singers at the Murat theatre Sunday afternoon was given a reception the like of which I have never experienced. The singing of the quartette was a revelation, and as for Rogers—well at 5:30 in the evening, after he had been on the stage for an hour and a half he had to quit from sheer exhaustion; and he could only get away then by asking the audience to please go home. By all means let me have this combination next year for three days or a week, if possible. And if you happen to have an open date at anytime during the present tour, I'll me glad to take it for a return engagement."—Henry K. Burton, Indianapolis, Ind.

"Birmingham talks of nothing today except Will Rogers. Over all our imagination still plays the lightening flashes of his penetrating merciless but kindly wit. We remembered you all evening with gratitude. For vivid personality keen and subtle humor it is understood by this form of presentation. Management function advertisially. Splendid publicity. Best regards. (Telegram)—The Beechers, Birmingham, Ala.

"Everybody is talking about Will Rogers. Not a dissenting voice as to the entertainment and wonderful compliments for the De Reszke Singers. Of course you knew this would be the case and I now know it. Put me down for a date next year."—Mrs. O. A. Shipman, Birmingham, Ala.

"Our people charmed with Will Rogers and De Reszke Singers last evening. One of the best entertainments ever presented in Lyman auditorium. Want date next season."—Mrs. L. C. Naff, Nashville, Tenn.

SALINEVILLE ROAD FINISHED

Last of Concrete Poured Yesterday Afternoon.

Wellsville today is connected with Salineville with a solid surfaced road, with the exception of a small portion in the corporate limits of Salineville. Contractors poured the last of the concrete on the new highway yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, completing the road work.

It is expected that the new thoroughfare will be thrown open to traffic around December 7.

There is still approximately six-tenths of a mile of the road in Salineville that is unimproved, but this road is being coated with cinders at the present time, and, consequently, will be in good condition for travel throughout the winter after the entire road is placed in use.

CLEVELAND MAN WEDS LOCAL GIRL

Announcement was made here today of the marriage of Miss Margaret Storck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Storck, of Fourteenth street, to John Reinheinen, of Cleveland, which was solemnized on Saturday in the rectory of the St. Stephen's Episcopal church, East Liverpool, by Dean T. G. C. McCalla, rector.

The couple was attended by Carl Storck, the bride's brother, and Miss Reinheinen, sister of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. Covers were laid for 30 guests.

The bride is a graduate of the local high school and recently has been employed as a stenographer in the office of the National Drawn Steel Co., East Liverpool. The bridegroom is a graduate of Ohio Northern University, at Ada, and is employed in Cleveland, where they will make their home.

Among the out of town guests were the bridegroom's mother and sister, Herbert Obest, Carl Storck, all of Cleveland, and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Palmer and children, of Hanoverton.

Arthur Brisbane Lauds Photoplay at Ceramic Theatre.

The growing influence of motion pictures in educational work seems to have been exemplified in "The Iron Horse,' a William Fox production based on the building of the first transcontinental rails, which was shown last night at the Ceramic theatre.

Such a picture, writes Arthur Brisbane, of Hearst's American, will do more to Americanize foreigners than any number of dreary sermons on the Constitution, and 100 per cent Americanism."

Mr. Brisbane goes on to say that "to see Lincoln walking in the White House corridors, to see live bison actually pursued by live Indians, and men laying the Union Pacific tracks under the fire of bows and arrows, is real education."

F. W. Mordaunt Hall, in The New York Times, remarks that "this is an instructive and inspiring film, one which should make every American proud of the manner of men who are responsible for great achievements in the face of danger."

The New York reviewers appeared to be unanimous in their judgment of the picture as an educational medium. "It is almost impossible to imagine any American seeing this picture play and failing to respond to its emotional appeal," wrote Quinn Martin, of The New York World. "Every steel spike seems to be driven with a tug at the audience's heart."

"A celebration, proud, loud and picturesque of the great American Odyssey,' says Gilbert W. Gabriel, of The Telegram and Evening Mail, while The Sun frankly announced that "it is one of the few films which this department can unhesitatingly recommend."

Alison Smith, in The Evening World, boldly asserted that "The Iron Horse" presents "the most truly dramatic sequence of scenes that the screen has caught for many seasons," while H. T. Torres, of The New York Commercial, says: "A great motion picture, a credit to the American picture industry."

In The Journal of Commerce, Edward E. Pidgeon writes that it is "a romantic and spectacular picture and one that for sincerity and detail, magnificence of background and convincing action, is in a class by itself."

"The Iron Horse' tells the story of the union of the railroads completing the link which bound the east and west in 1869. Scenes show the Union Pacific and Central Pacific engines meeting at Promontory Point, Utah, and others depict the life of the rail builders on the prairies. John Ford was the director, and the leading roles were played by George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy. The picture played for a year at the Lyric theatre, in New York City.

MEN'S LIFE SPAN PUZZLES SCIENCE

Do Married Men or Bachelors Live Longest Not Answered.

New York.—Which lives longer—the married man or the bachelor? Few other questions in vital statistics have been more widely discussed, says the New York Times. All information bearing on the subject has been studied by physicians, scientists, theologians, social welfare experts and criminologists, and with particular attention by the insurance companies.

The answer to this ancient question has a general and far reaching influence. If it is established that the chances of long life are greater for bachelors than for the married, both men and women will naturally be influenced in choosing between the two states. The moralist finds such statistics the basis for argument. For the insurance companies the question is a very practical one. Before millions of dollars are risked upon the expectation of life, the most reliable figures obtainable are gathered, regardless of trouble or expense.

Despite painstaking investigation, the problem today is still unsolved.

Hard Words for Bachelorhood.

One of the most distinguished advocates of the good influence of marriage on longevity, Dr. James Stark, registrar general of Scotland, said, after careful investigation, that "bachelorhood is more destructive to long life than the most unwholesome of trades."

An array of figures has been quoted to prove this extreme view.

According to Doctor Stark's figures, out of every 100,000 married men between the ages of forty and fifty, 1,407 die each year, as compared with 1,835 unmarried men who die among a similar number in the same period. In the early ages from twenty-five to thirty-five years, the proportion of deaths among the unmarried men is even greater. Out of 100,000 married persons, including widowers, from twenty to twenty-five years old, 626 die every year, while in the same number of unmarried persons between the same ages no fewer than 1,231 die annually.

According to other British statistics, the average number of deaths per year among unmarried men between the ages of twenty-nine and forty-six years is twenty-eight in every 1,000, while among married men in the same period the deaths are only 18.

A famous table prepared by Doctor Stark shows the contrast between the mortality of the married and the single is greatest between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, and varies considerably at subsequent ages. His summary of the yearly mortality per 100,000 is as follows:

Ages.	Married.	Single.
20-25	6.26	12.31
25-30	8.23	14.94
30-35	8.65	15.94
35-40	11.67	16.03
40-45	14.07	18.35
45-50	17.04	21.18
50-55	19.54	26.34
55-60	26.14	28.54
60-65	35.63	44.54
65-70	52.93	60.21
70-75	81.56	102.71
75-80	117.85	143.94
80-85	173.88	195.40

Some significant figures along this line have been collected by Bertillon, who formulated the familiar system of finger-print identification of criminals. The investigations of the statisticians of many insurance companies point to similar conclusions.

Old Ones All Married.

The greater longevity of married men over bachelors is also pointed out by Christopher von Rufeland in his work, "The Art of Prolonging Life." This authority goes so far as to say that "there is not one instance of a bachelor's having attained to a great age." He also asserts, as a result of his investigations, that "all those people who have become very old were married more than once." This condition, he says, applies to both men and women. Similar claims for the influence of married life upon longevity might be quoted indefinitely.

Some of the best minds of the age have studied the problem. The statistics above quoted have been attacked by no less an authority than Herbert Spencer. The great philosopher accepted the statistics gathered by the Scotch statistician and others, but disagreed entirely with the conclusion that marriage itself prolongs life. The experts of modern insurance companies, it is found, seem to agree with Spencer's reasoning.

The great mass of statistics on the subject indicates in the main that married men as a rule actually live longer than bachelors, and that the advantage, measured in years, is often considerable. The best information obtainable is that such is true in both America and Europe.

The latest figures on the subject are probably those gathered by Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance company of Newark. He has found that the death rate among single men in America is appreciably higher than among married men.

Record Breaker.

FOSTORIA, O.—Mrs. W. H. Pelton purchased a hen turkey for Christmas dinner two or three years ago, but ere the holiday came around, had become so attached to the bird that she has since kept it as a pet. In 1924 the turkey produced 89 eggs. Since January 1, this year, the turkey has laid more than 100 eggs and is apparently trying to break all records for 1925.

Miles of Flying Ants Invade Adirondacks

Saranac Lake, N. Y.—A great column of flying ants recently passed down the Raquette River valley section of the Adirondacks. A cloud of insects estimated to be four miles long required an hour and a quarter to pass given points. Amazed residents at first believed the cloud was smoke from a forest fire. The ants flew in great sections, but the sections were never more than a few feet apart.

After the passing of the column, the river surface was covered with the bodies of thousands of insects that had flown too low. The ants were about a quarter of an inch long with the exception of the queens which measured a half inch. Flying ants are new to the Adirondacks.

Seven-Ton Meteorite Found in Greenland

Aberdeen, Scotland.—The third largest meteorite in the world just arrived here from Greenland aboard the Danish schooner Sokongen. Nobody here has yet seen the stone, but Captain Pedersen of the Sokongen says it weighs seven tons.

Eskimos are said to have stated that the meteorite fell in 1918 and that they had been dragging it toward the coast on dog sledges since 1923. Much difficulty was encountered in taking the meteorite on board the Sokongen. Captain Pedersen said he had much trouble in steering his vessel to Aberdeen, because the stone deflected the compass.

The Sokongen in 1924 rescued the Danish explorer, Peter Freunehen, who had been lost in Baffin Land for three years.

Of the two larger meteorites in existence, one is in the United States and the other in Great Britain.

WHY PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND SANGRINA TO FAT PEOPLE

If I had not carefully analyzed, tested and seen my own sister reduce and improve her health with 'SAN-GRI-NA,'" says Dr. McAlpine, "I would not be recommending it to my patients to-day."

Dr. Jacoby writes: "My wife has about finished the 'SAN-GRI-NA' you sent her, and I wish you could see the wonderful change in her appearance. She never felt better in all her life."

"I have used 'SAN-GRI-NA' for my wife," says Dr. Harris, "and now recommend it to my fat patients."

"I recommended 'SAN-GRI-NA' to my mother," says Dr. Narbonne, because I knew, after working at the formula for years, it was absolutely harmless to the health and positive in results. It is the only way I know of to a good figure and perfect health."

REDUCES 63 POUNDS

"I weighed 260 pounds," writes Mrs. M. D. Pasquala, of Worcester, "and lost 63 pounds. . . . I would like to have another box of 'SAN-GRI-NA'."

Up to now physicians have rarely advised anything to reduce outside of diets or exercises (both tiresome and inconvenient) because they knew of nothing HARMLESS and EFFECTIVE, but to-day in recommending "SAN-GRI-NA" a doctor feels that it is something with real merit, so entirely different from all the advertised fat reducers, that he does not hesitate to advise its use even to his own family. Prominent medical men, such as Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, endorses "SAN-GRI-NA" AS THE ONLY SAFE, positive and quick way to slenderness he knows of.

"SAN-GRI-NA" is the formula of a French physician. It is put up in a small, convenient tablet, to be taken three times a day. Although only recently introduced in America, "SAN-GRI-NA" is now recognized as a most effective treatment for fat people, because:

➔IT HAS REDUCED MOST OBSTINATE CASES OF OBESITY.
➔IT DOES AWAY WITH HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE, PUFFING, HEADACHES, TIRED FEELING, AND THE FAT MAN OR WOMAN WHO TAKES SAN-GRI-NA ONCE MORE ENJOYS LIFE.
➔IT IS ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FROM ANYTHING EVER OFFERED.
➔IT IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC: Beware of worthless imitations. San-Gri-Na is sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. Go to your druggist and be sure to ASK FOR AND GET THE FRENCH BOX MARKED "VERI-TABLETTES SAN-GRI-NA."

On sale at any good Drug or Department Store. If your druggist does no carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C.

MEN'S LIFE SPAN PUZZLES SCIENCE

Do Married Men or Bachelors Live Longest Not Answered.

New York.—Which lives longer—the married man or the bachelor? Few other questions in vital statistics have been more widely discussed, says the New York Times. All information bearing on the subject has been studied by physicians, scientists, theologians, social welfare experts and criminologists, and with particular attention by the insurance companies.

The answer to this ancient question has a general and far reaching influence. If it is established that the chances of long life are greater for bachelors than for the married, both men and women will naturally be influenced in choosing between the two states. The moralist finds such statistics the basis for argument. For the insurance companies the question is a very practical one. Before millions of dollars are risked upon the expectation of life, the most reliable figures obtainable are gathered, regardless of trouble or expense.

Despite painstaking investigation, the problem today is still unsolved.

Hard Words for Bachelorhood.

One of the most distinguished advocates of the good influence of marriage on longevity, Dr. James Stark, registrar general of Scotland, said, after careful investigation, that "bachelorhood is more destructive to long life than the most unwholesome of trades." An array of figures has been quoted to prove this extreme view.

According to Doctor Stark's figures, out of every 100,000 married men between the ages of forty and fifty, 1,407 die each year, as compared with 1,835 unmarried men who die among a similar number in the same period. In the early ages from twenty-five to thirty-five years, the proportion of deaths among the unmarried men is even greater. Out of 100,000 married persons, including widowers, from twenty to twenty-five years old, 626 die every year, while in the same number of unmarried persons between the same ages no fewer than 1,231 die annually.

According to other British statistics, the average number of deaths per year among unmarried men between the ages of twenty-nine and forty-six years is twenty-eight in every 1,000, while among married men in the same period the deaths are only 18.

A famous table prepared by Doctor Stark shows the contrast between the mortality of the married and the single is greatest between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, and varies considerably at subsequent ages. His summary of the yearly mortality per 100,000 is as follows:

Ages.	Married.	Single.
20-25	6.26	12.31
25-30	8.23	14.94
30-35	8.65	15.94
35-40	11.67	16.02
40-45	14.07	18.38
45-50	17.04	21.18
50-55	19.54	26.34
55-60	26.14	28.54
60-65	35.63	44.54
65-70	52.93	60.21
70-75	81.56	102.71
75-80	117.85	143.94
80-85	173.88	195.40

Some significant figures along this line have been collected by Bertillon, who formulated the familiar system of finger-print identification of criminals. The investigations of the statisticians of many insurance companies point to similar conclusions.

Old Ones All Married.

The greater longevity of married men over bachelors is also pointed out by Christopher von Rufeland in his work, "The Art of Prolonging Life." This authority goes so far as to say that "there is not one instance of a bachelor's having attained to a great age." He also asserts, as a result of his investigations, that "all those people who have become very old were married more than once." This condition, he says, applies to both men and women. Similar claims for the influence of married life upon longevity might be quoted indefinitely.

Some of the best minds of the age have studied the problem. The statistics above quoted have been attacked by no less an authority than Herbert Spencer. The great philosopher accepted the statistics gathered by the Scotch statistician and others, but disagreed entirely with the conclusion that marriage itself prolongs life. The experts of modern insurance companies, it is found, seem to agree with Spencer's reasoning.

The great mass of statistics on the subject indicates in the main that married men as a rule actually live longer than bachelors, and that the advantage, measured in years, is often considerable. The best information obtainable is that such is true in both America and Europe.

The latest figures on the subject are probably those gathered by Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance company of Newark. He has found that the death rate among single men in America is appreciably higher than among married men.

In 1924 the turkey produced 89 eggs. Since January 1, this year, the turkey has laid more than 100 eggs and is apparently trying to break all records for 1925.

Miles of Flying Ants Invade Adirondacks

Saranac Lake, N. Y.—A great column of flying ants recently passed down the Raquette River valley section of the Adirondacks. A cloud of insects estimated to be four miles long required an hour and a quarter to pass given points. Amazed residents at first believed the cloud was smoke from a forest fire. The ants flew in great sections, but the sections were never more than a few feet apart.

After the passing of the column, the river surface was covered with the bodies of thousands of insects that had flown too low. The ants were about a quarter of an inch long with the exception of the queens which measured a half inch. Flying ants are new to the Adirondacks.

Motor Tax Cut

The congressional proposal to cut the federal tax on motor cars from 5 per cent to 3 per cent is sailed with joy by nearly 20,000,000 automobile owners. It pleases especially the prospective buyer of a new car, for this tax applies only on purchases. The motor car manufacturers have all pledged themselves to pass along the saving to their customers. This should mean an average saving of $15 to $20 a car.

In view of the fact that automobiles are subject to more taxes, federal and state together, than any other form of property, a very good argument can be made for abolishing this federal tax altogether, thereby benefitting the average automobile purchaser to the extent of $40 or $50.

Perhaps the finest thing, however, about the proposed reduction, is the manufacturers' pledge of good faith. This example is one that might be followed more generally in industries benefitting by federal tax remission.

The Stock Market

Stocks suddenly slumped the other day more spectacularly than they had risen. Perhaps the boom was over-played. What goes up must come down. It is the nature of mounting waves to sink back. Tighter credit threatened. The public grew doubtful and scary, the professional "shorts" sought to cover. So quotations fell.

They may jiggle up and down for a while. These things are in the hands of the gods of chance. But underneath the up-swing and the tumble and the jiggling are big, basic facts that will determine the securities curve through the winter.

The long climb of stock prices reflected, without doubt, the very strong economic situation in America and the rational expectations based on it by long-visioned men. It represented, too, without doubt, the more promising situation in Europe, especially since the treaty of Locarno. With prosperity at home and a stable market promised abroad, with greater promise of payment of foreign debts, what business heights would be impossible?

The slump probably reflected, along with the causes suggested above, a new flurry of fear about European peace. Things have looked less sure lately in Germany and France.

Draw a red ring around a date on the calendar. The date is December 1. On that day the powers signing the security guarantees and arbitration treaties at Locarno are scheduled to ratify them in London. If they do, Wall Street may blow the lid off, while pacifists and humanitarians generally celebrate in their own way.

Religion From Police

A police officer is usually expected to wield a club in literal enforcement of the written law—not to probe for the ultimate cause of crime and suggest fundamental remedies.

Richard E. Enright, police commissioner of New York city, isn't content to be merely a club-swinger. He frankly admits the crime wave, and looks beyond the actual criminal. He finds the cause of it in the state of mind of society as a whole, and proposes the same remedy that was advocated by President Coolidge.

"We must get back to religion," says the commissioner, "back to God, back to home life and prayer, back to the old home standards, back to personal supervision of child by parent, back to purity of standards of living.

"We must get away from irreverence for God, for home and for father and mother, away from irreverence for law, away from booze parties, petting parties, lascivious literature, false standards of life and all that lead to them."

Here, as every thoughtful person will probably admit, is the literal truth. And it puts the responsibility up to every individual instead of leaving it to the police, the clergy and the educators.

Boll Weevil Licked

The American cotton crop this year amounts to 14,000,000 bales, which is a bouncing crop if not a bumper one. It would have been 15,000,000 bales except for a burning drought in Texas. It means plenty of cotton for America and the rest of the world and a boost for southern prosperity.

It means something more notable than that. A few years ago cotton-growers were very pessimistic. The boll weevil was making steady headway. They feared it was going to destroy the great cotton industry. Now the tide has turned. Man has learned how to fight this pest, and is winning. The 1925 crop proves that at last the weevil is definitely on the run.

Russians, observing the crazy gyrations of the compass in the province of Kursk, have explored there and found rich iron fields. Now they should take their wobbling political compass and search for a vein of common sense.

Not many prospective rulers could be unseated as many times as the Prince of Wales and still hope to rule.

If income taxes are reduced much more, the simplest way out of it will be to make an honest tax report.

Yes, Christmas comes but once a year; but the enthusiastic celebrant can spend all year paying for it.

Tomboy Taylor— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—There is a conviction even extending to literary men themselves that drink and drugs have played important parts in the lives of genius. Without disease or stimulants there are no sparks. Poe and Stevenson, fighting tuberculosis, wrote best when they felt worst.

Swinburne cut off from the bottle failed as a poet. And they point to DeQuincey, Rosetti and Coleridge. One could go on indefinitely—Nietzsche and even our own O. Henry and Jack London. The list is long. And yet it is easily overshadowed by sober and healthy genius.

Even Wilde did his most notable work away from boulevard tables. And Byron sober was a better Byron. One wonders what would have happened to the artistic creation of the drugged and drunken children of genius without stimulants. Perhaps better work. Who knows?

This I notice. Men who are doing the finest work in a literary way in New York are temperate. Once in awhile they step out for a little toot, but it is a tame proceeding. Best sellers are from women who never touch liquor—Edna Ferber, Fannie Hurst and Kathleen Norris, for instance!

The crack newspaper reporters of Park Row these days are temperate. Two able humorists quit drinking some years ago and are doing their best work. The highest salaried special men on New York papers are those who seldom indulge more than a cocktail at a sitting. Or standing.

Channing Pollock, George Kaufman, Laurence Stallings, Maxwell Anderson and nearly all successful playwrights are extremely temperate. This is largely true of musical comedy librettists, lyricists and composers. And the theatrical producer is almost invariably a teetotaler.

It may be opium, alcohol and microbes have something to do with genius, but it can be rather satisfactorily proved genius can get along without them.

It used to be the boast of an old Park Row reporter that the best story he ever wrote was written when so cooked he couldn't see the typewriter. He didn't know for years he never wrote the story he treasured. It was dashed off by the sober head of the copy desk who could only glean bare facts from the drivel.

I believe experience of most newspapermen are applicable to every writer. Two drinks and work is about the least of all things they care to do.

There are many views of the liquor question. For instance, there is a big executive who rarely places a man in an important post if he finds he is a teetotaler. He has a theory such men have other weaknesses more harmful.

Students of the narcotic question will tell you there are men and women in important posts who have been addicted to drugs for years. They never show it, they say. They bear the respect of business associates and friends. They have no part in the drug orgies of Broadway. In most instances they took to drugs to relieve pain and became chronic addicts. Their plight is known only to physicians. Their enslavement often prevents them from promiscuous association. They live in fear of their secret becoming known.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Colorado River Development.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17.—The Colorado river, aside from flowing through the most magnificent gorge in the world—the Grand Canyon—and delighting tourists with its matchless scenery, also offers itself to the population of seven western states as the source of untold water power. Again it shows itself as a factor to be reckoned with, for its floods menace those who live in its basin. There is need, then, of shackling the stream, both for the utility and the safety to be derived. The seven states interested are California, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, and Wyoming.

In its review of 1925, the department of the Interior presents some general aspects of the problem, and in a report of voluminous proportions, prepared by E. C. LaRue for the department, a wealth of data concerning the subject is given which will serve as a basis for future development.

The Colorado is one of the remarkable rivers in the world in its value for irrigation and water power. Its present opportunities for the complete use of an immense quantity of water, great concentrations of fall, reservoir sites for the control of flow, sites for power plants, and several million acres of irrigable land below the stretch where power may be developed. In this sense it is similar to the Columbia, which also may be used for both water power and irrigation, but no other river on the North American continent presents such tremendous opportunities for the double use of its water.

The drainage basin of the Colorado covers an area of 244,000 square miles. This is one-thirteenth of the area of the United States. It flows into the Republic of Mexico, where it is used for irrigation. Its resources constitute the most important undeveloped asset of this great region and will play an important part in the development of agriculture, industry, wealth, and population. Hence the problems of its development assume an interest of interstate, even international proportions.

Perhaps the most urgent need of the basin is the flood protection of communities and large irrigated areas near Yuma, Arizona, and in the Imperial Valley in California. The value of property in these regions is more than $100,000,000, and the prosperity and lives of thousands of persons on either side of the international boundry are menaced. The Colorado, surging to the Gulf of California, carries with it an immense burden of silt. It builds up its bed across the delta, making necessary the building of dikes and levees in order to confine it. The flood menace increases with the advance of years and the cost of maintaining levees as defence against it is increasing too.

Natural Advantages.

The Colorado and its upper tributaries rise in the mountains of Wyoming, Colorado, and Utah. The precipitation in this section, especially in the form of snow, is very heavy. The valleys of the upper tributaries have an excellent climate that is well adapted to agriculture and industry. Combined with these advantages is the beautiful scenery that makes the region attractive for the building of homes.

The irrigable lands in these valleys in part have been irrigated and cities and towns built, and a substantial development of the region is under way. Additional irrigation here will deplete somewhat the present flow of water in the canyon or power section of the river and in the lower part of the basin where the largest arid areas are situated. Only a few small water-power plants have been erected although there are many available sites. The utilization of water-power sites does not decrease the water supply of the river except through the increased evaporation caused by the increase in water surface exposed to the sunlight and air in new storage reservoirs. Therefore there are good reasons why there should be a development of the upper basin and the utilization of available water supply for both power and irrigation.

The canyon section of the river offers the second largest concentration of water-power sites in the United States and the third largest on the North American continent. Its only superiors in this respect are the St. Lawrence and the Columbia river basins. These rivers also are international, with the advantage lying on the Canadian side. Equalization of flow in the St. Lawrence is accomplished naturally by the Great Lakes. An equally effective control of flow may me accomplished with the Colorado by the construction of reservoirs.

Generation of Electric Power.

Therefore the value of power sites in the Colorado may be increased greatly by building reservoirs in or near the upper end of the stretch of great fall, whereby the erratic natural flow of the river may be converted into a discharge that will be nearly uniform over a period of years. Dam sites have been discovered and surveyed in the canyon section that make possible the utilization of the whole fall or any part of it that may be desired.

The need for further agricultural development of the Colorado river basin will increase, but teh necessity for electric power in the bason and in contiguous regions will increase more rapidly. A program for this development must be followed cautiously and not in advance of actual requirements. The department of Interior thinks that too rapid an advance would be uneconomical and would result in losses of invested capital.

Another point to be considered in the development of the Colorado is navigation. It has never been satisfactory, although steamboats have come from the Gulf of California up as far as the old town of Callville at the lower end of Boulder Canyon. Before the coming of the railroads navigation was slight but important. Since the coming of the railroad navigation has been continued but its importance has decreased. Sand bars, shifty and treacherous, and dangerous rapids constitute a great obstruction.

The erection of dams for storage and power will provide safe access by boat to certain parts of the canyon section of the river which are now inaccessible except at the risk of great danger and at considerable expense. A dam in Glen Canyon will make it possible for a motor boat to penetrate 150 or 200 miles further up the river traversing a country now inaccessible, that is replete with beautiful scenery.

The construction of an automobile road from a trunk-line railroad to some point on the backwater of such a dam would open up one of the most attractive tourist areas of the continent. Other dams would create longer or shorter stretches of clack water and would open other beautiful canyons to tourists. These projects would make the Grand Canyon navigable and open up a country which surpasses in beauty the famous Norwegian fijords.

The Colorado river development idea has been under consideration since the beginning of the century. It is now taking concrete form and soon may become a certainty.

Motor Tax Cut

The congressional proposal to cut the federal tax on motor cars from 5 per cent to 3 per cent is sailed with joy by nearly 20,000,000 automobile owners. It pleases especially the prospective buyer of a new car, for this tax applies only on purchases. The motor car manufacturers have all pledged themselves to pass along the saving to their customers. This should mean an average saving of $15 to $20 a car.

In view of the fact that automobiles are subject to more taxes, federal and state together, than any other form of property, a very good argument can be made for abolishing this federal tax altogether, thereby benefitting the average automobile purchaser to the extent of $40 or $50.

Perhaps the finest thing, however, about the proposed reduction, is the manufacturers' pledge of good faith. This example is one that might be followed more generally in industries benefitting by federal tax remission.

The Stock Market

Stocks suddenly slumped the other day more spectacularly than they had risen. Perhaps the boom was over-played. What goes up must come down. It is the nature of mounting waves to sink back. Tighter credit threatened. The public grew doubtful and scary, the professional "shorts" sought to cover. So quotations fell.

They may jiggle up and down for a while. These things are in the hands of the gods of chance. But underneath the up-swing and the tumble and the jiggling are big, basic facts that will determine the securities curve through the winter.

The long climb of stock prices reflected, without doubt, the very strong economic situation in America and the rational expectations based on it by long-visioned men. It represented, too, without doubt, the more promising situation in Europe, especially since the treaty of Locarno. With prosperity at home and a stable market promised abroad, with greater promise of payment of foreign debts, what business heights would be impossible?

The slump probably reflected, along with the causes suggested above, a new flurry of fear about European peace. Things have looked less sure lately in Germany and France.

Draw a red ring around a date on the calendar. The date is December 1. On that day the powers signing the security guarantees and arbitration treaties at Locarno are scheduled to ratify them in London. If they do, Wall Street may blow the lid off, while pacifists and humanitarians generally celebrate in their own way.

Religion From Police

A police officer is usually expected to wield a club in literal enforcement of the written law—not to probe for the ultimate cause of crime and suggest fundamental remedies.

Richard E. Enright, police commissioner of New York city, isn't content to be merely a club-swinger. He frankly admits the crime wave, and looks beyond the actual criminal. He finds the cause of it in the state of mind of society as a whole, and proposes the same remedy that was advocated by President Coolidge.

"We must get back to religion," says the commissioner, "back to God, back to home life and prayer, back to the old home standards, back to personal supervision of child by parent, back to purity of standards of living.

"We must get away from irreverence for God, for home and for father and mother, away from irreverence for law, away from booze parties, petting parties, lascivious literature, false standards of life and all that lead to them."

Here, as every thoughtful person will probably admit, is the literal truth. And it puts the responsibility up to every individual instead of leaving it to the police, the clergy and the educators.

Boll Weevil Licked

The American cotton crop this year amounts to 14,000,000 bales, which is a bouncing crop if not a bumper one. It would have been 15,000,000 bales except for a burning drought in Texas. It means plenty of cotton for America and the rest of the world and a boost for southern prosperity.

It means something more notable than that. A few years ago cotton-growers were very pessimistic. The boll weevil was making steady headway. They feared it was going to destroy the great cotton industry. Now the tide has turned. Man has learned how to fight this pest, and is winning. The 1925 crop proves that at last the weevil is definitely on the run.

Russians, observing the crazy gyrations of the compass in the province of Kursk, have explored there and found rich iron fields. Now they should take their wobbling political compass and search for a vein of common sense.

Not many prospective rulers could be unseated as many times as the Prince of Wales and still hope to rule.

If income taxes are reduced much more, the simplest way out of it will be to make an honest tax report.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—There is a conviction even extending to literary men themselves that drink and drugs have played important parts in the lives of genius. Without disease or stimulants there are no sparks. Poe and Stevenson, fighting tuberculosis, wrote best when they felt worst.

Swinburne cut off from the bottle failed as a poet. And they point to DeQuincey, Rosetti and Coleridge. One could go on indefinitely—Nietzsche and even our own O. Henry and Jack London. The list is long. And yet it is easily overshadowed by sober and healthy genius.

Even Wilde did his most notable work away from boulevard tables. And Byron sober was a better Byron. One wonders what would have happened to the artistic creation of the drugged and drunken children of genius without stimulants. Perhaps better work. Who knows?

This I notice. Men who are doing the finest work in a literary way in New York are temperate. Once in awhile they step out for a little toot, but it is a tame proceeding. Best sellers are from women who never touch liquor—Edna Ferber, Fannie Hurst and Kathleen Norris, for instance!

The crack newspaper reporters of Park Row these days are temperate. Two able humorists quit drinking some years ago and are doing their best work. The highest salaried special men on New York papers are those who seldom indulge more than a cocktail at a sitting. Or standing.

Channing Pollock, George Kaufman, Laurence Stallings, Maxwell Anderson and nearly all successful playwrights are extremely temperate. This is largely true of musical comedy librettists, lyricists and composers. And the theatrical producer is almost invariably a teetotaler.

It may be opium, alcohol and microbes have something to do with genius, but it can be rather satisfactorily proved genius can get along without them.

It used to be the boast of an old Park Row reporter that the best story he ever wrote was written when so cooked he couldn't see the typewriter. He didn't know for years he never wrote the story he treasured. It was dashed off by the sober head of the copy desk who could only glean bare facts from the drivel.

I believe experience of most newspapermen are applicable to every writer. Two drinks and work is about the least of all things they care to do.

There are many views of the liquor question. For instance, there is a big executive who rarely places a man in an important post if he finds he is a teetotaler. He has a theory such men have other weaknesses more harmful.

Students of the narcotic question will tell you there are men and women in important posts who have been addicted to drugs for years. They never show it, they say. They bear the respect of business associates and friends. They have no part in the drug orgies of Broadway. In most instances they took to drugs to relieve pain and became chronic addicts. Their plight is known only to physicians. Their enslavement often prevents them from promiscuous association. They live in fear of their secret becoming known.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Colorado River Development.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17.—The Colorado river, aside from flowing through the most magnificent gorge in the world—the Grand Canyon—and delighting tourists with its matchless scenery, also offers itself to the population of seven western states as the source of untold water power. Again it shows itself as a factor to be reckoned with, for its floods menace those who live in its basin. There is need, then, of shackling the stream, both for the utility and the safety to be derived. The seven states interested are California, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, and Wyoming.

In its review of 1925, the department of the Interior presents some general aspects of the problem, and in a report of voluminous proportions, prepared by E. C. LaRue for the department, a wealth of data concerning the subject is given which will serve as a basis for future development.

The Colorado is one of the remarkable rivers in the world in its value for irrigation and water power. Its present opportunities for the complete use of an immense quantity of water, great concentrations of fall, reservoir sites for the control of flow, sites for power plants, and several million acres of irrigable land below the stretch where power may be developed. In this sense it is smilar to the Columbia, which also may be used for both water power and irrigation, but no other river on the North American continent presents such tremendous opportunities for the double use of its water.

The drainage basin of the Colorado covers an area of 244,000 square miles. This is one-thirteenth of the area of the United States. It flows into the Republic of Mexico, where it is used for irrigation. Its resources constitute the most important undeveloped asset of this great region and will play an important part in the development of agriculture, industry, wealth, and population. Hence the problems of its development assume an interest of interstate, even international proportions.

Perhaps the most urgent need of the basin is the flood protection of communities and large irrigated areas near Yuma, Arizona, and in the Imperial Valley in California. The value of property in these regions is more than $100,000,000, and the prosperity and lives of thousands of persons on either side of the international boundry are menaced. The Colorado, surging to the Gulf of California, carries with it an immense burden of silt. It builds up its bed across the delta, making necessary the building of dikes and levees in order to confine it. The flood menace increases with the advance of years and the cost of maintaining levees as defence against it is increasing too.

Natural Advantages.

The Colorado and its upper tributaries rise in the mountains of Wyoming, Colorado, and Utah. The precipitation in this section, especially in the form of snow, is very heavy. The valleys of the upper tributaries have an excellent climate that is well adapted to agriculture and industry. Combined with these advantages is the beautiful scenery that makes the region attractive for the building of homes.

The irrigable lands in these valleys in part have been irrigated and cities and towns built, and a substantial development of the region is under way. Additional irrigation here will deplete somewhat the present flow of water in the canyon or power section of the river and in the lower part of the basin where the largest arid areas are situated. Only a few small water-power plants have been erected although there are many available sites. The utilization of water-power sites does not decrease the water supply of the river except through the increased evaporation caused by the increase in water surface exposed to the sunlight and air in new storage reservoirs. Therefore there are good reasons why there should be a development of the upper basin and the utilization of available water supply for both power and irrigation.

The canyon section of the river offers the second largest concentration of water-power sites in the United States and the third largest on the North American continent. Its only superiors in this respect are the St. Lawrence and the Columbia river basins. These rivers also are international, with the advantage lying on the Canadian side. Equalization of flow in the St. Lawrence is accomplished naturally by the Great Lakes. An equally effective control of flow may me accomplished with the Colorado by the construction of reservoirs.

Generation of Electric Power.

Therefore the value of power sites in the Colorado may be increased greatly by building reservoirs in or near the upper end of the stretch of great fall, whereby the erratic natural flow of the river may be converted into a discharge that will be nearly uniform over a period of years. Dam sites have been discovered and surveyed in the canyon section that make possible the utilization of the whole fall or any part of it that may be desired.

The need for further agricultural development of the Colorado river basin will increase, but teh necessity for electric power in the bason and in contiguous regions will increase more rapidly. A program for this development must be followed cautiously and not in advance of actual requirements. The department of Interior thinks that too rapid an advance would be uneconomical and would result in losses of invested capital.

Another point to be considered in the development of the Colorado is navigation. It has never been satisfactory, although steamboats have come from the Gulf of California up as far as the old town of Callville at the lower end of Boulder Canyon. Before the coming of the railroads navigation was slight but important. Since the coming of the railroad navigation has been continued but its importance has decreased. Sand bars shifty and treacherous, and dangerous rapids constitute a great obstruction.

The erection of dams for storage and power will provide safe access by boat to certain parts of the canyon section of the river which are now inaccessible except at the risk of great danger and at considerable expense. A dam in Glen Canyon will make it possible for a motor boat to penetrate 150 or 200 miles further up the river traversing a country now inaccessible that is replete with beautiful scenery.

The construction of an automobile road from a trunk-line railroad to some point on the backwater of such a dam would open up one of the most attractive tourist areas of the continent. Other dams would create longer or shorter stretches of clack water and would open other beautiful canyons to tourists. These projects would make the Grand Canyon navigable and open up a country which surpasses in beauty the famous Norwegian fijords.

The Colorado river development idea has been under consideration since the beginning of the century. It is now taking concrete form and soon may become a certainty.

YOUR HEALTH

How Sight Is Restored to Cataract-Blinded Eyes

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MANY persons write asking about the operation for cataract. They want to know if it is serious, whether it hurts or not and what the chances are for success.

I doubt if there is any other subject in medicine which I can write about with greater confidence than I can upon this particular one. It so happens that during my professional life I have had the privilege of operating upon a multitude of cases of cataract and restoring hundreds to sight.

These patients have come from all walks in life, from the rich and from the poor, from those in middle-age and from old persons.

You will recall that cataract is essentially a disease of advanced life. There is a form found in babies, but this is not the kind we are talking about to-day.

Cataract is a disturbance of the crystalline lens of the eye, a structure that lies in the interior of the eyeball. It is not a growth of a film on the outside of the eye as many persons think.

The operation consists in making an incision through the outer covering of the eye, opening the eyeball itself. You can see that this will permit the fluids of the eye to run out, and the operation must be very skilfully done or it will destroy the sight.

Having opened into the eyeball, the surgeon removes or scoops out the crystalline lens which has become opaque and no longer permits light to enter the eye.

This procedure may seem formidable. As a matter of fact, it is quickly done. The entire operation takes less than a minute or two. Cocaine or some chief local anesthetic is employed, so that the operation itself is painless.

The eye is bandaged and the patient is put to bed for the one purpose of being kept quiet so that healing may progress. In a little while the effects of the local anesthetic pass away and there may be some smarting and burning in the eye, but this will last only two or three hours, and is not severe in most instances.

It has been my practice to leave the bandage undisturbed for a couple of days. During this time there is no discomfort beyond the inconvenience of keeping quiet in bed. After the first time the eye is redressed, a new dressing is put on every day, and in four or five days the patient is permitted to leave the bed.

In a case less favorable than this there may be some reaction and the development of a low degree of inflammation, known as "iritis." This complication delays complete recovery, but by skilful treatment it speedily disappears.

After the recovery is complete, it is necessary to wear glasses to overcome the loss of the crystalline lens. That is the reason why persons who have been operated for cataract wear such thick glasses.

There is no operation known to surgery which is so satisfactory because of its immediate beneficial results.

Bodies of Two Babies Buried With Permits Exhumed on Farm

DOVER, O.—The bodies of two babies were exhumed on the same farm within two weeks—the graves only about 500 yards apart.

On Thursday, November 3, Coroner Lewis found the first grave contained the body of the three-hour-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Arthur Benfer. Jerry Hartline, the child's grandfather, confessed to burying the first child, and was fined $50 for burying without a permit.

A sheriff's investigation resulted in the arrest of Russell Hartline, son of Jerry Hartline. Later, on trial on the same charge his father faced a few days previous, he was fined the same amount.

Russia's bumper grain crops this season caused depression to agricultural markets in nearby countries, business becoming dull in Latvia and the agricultural products trade becoming stagnated in Rumania in what is usually an active season of the year.

YOUR HEALTH

How Sight Is Restored to Cataract-Blinded Eyes

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MANY persons write asking about the operation for cataract. They want to know if it is serious, whether it hurts or not and what the chances are for success.

I doubt if there is any other subject in medicine which I can write about with greater confidence than I can upon this particular one. It so happens that during my professional life I have had the privilege of operating upon a multitude of cases of cataract and restoring hundreds to sight.

These patients have come from all walks in life, from the rich and from the poor, from those in middle-age and from old persons.

You will recall that cataract is essentially a disease of advanced life. There is a form found in babies, but this is not the kind we are talking about to-day.

Cataract is a disturbance of the crystalline lens of the eye, a structure that lies in the interior of the eyeball. It is not a growth of a film on the outside of the eye as many persons think.

The operation consists in making an incision through the outer covering of the eye, opening the eyeball itself. You can see that this will permit the fluids of the eye to run out, and the operation must be very skilfully done or it will destroy the sight.

Having opened into the eyeball, the surgeon removes or scoops out the crystalline lens which has become opaque and no longer permits light to enter the eye.

This procedure may seem formidable. As a matter of fact, it is quickly done. The entire operation takes less than a minute or two. Cocaine or some chief local anesthetic is employed, so that the operation itself is painless.

The eye is bandaged and the patient is put to bed for the one purpose of being kept quiet so that healing may progress. In a little while the effects of the local anesthetic pass away and there may be some smarting and burning in the eye, but this will last only two or three hours, and is not severe in most instances.

It has been my practice to leave the bandage undisturbed for a couple of days. During this time there is no discomfort beyond the inconvenience of keeping quiet in bed. After the first time the eye is redressed, a new dressing is put on every day, and in four or five days the patient is permitted to leave the bed.

In a case less favorable than this there may be some reaction and the development of a low degree of inflammation, known as "iritis." This complication delays complete recovery, but by skilful treatment it speedily disappears.

After the recovery is complete, it is necessary to wear glasses to overcome the loss of the crystalline lens. That is the reason why persons who have been operated for cataract wear such thick glasses.

There is no operation known to surgery which is so satisfactory because of its immediate beneficial results.

Principal Street Curbs Will be Marked for Auto Parking.

Council met in regular session last evening in the municipal building.

Decision was reached on the marking of parking space for automobiles in the vicinity of Third and Fifth streets and Carolina avenue. The curbs will be painted yellow.

The ordinance closing an alley in Sixth street adjacent to the new high school building now in the course of erection was passed on final reading by unanimous vote.

Adjournment followed after the transaction of routine business.

WEIRTON BLAZE BEING PROBED

Authorities are conducting an investigation into the cause of the fire which recently destroyed the Flint garage in Weirton resulting in a loss estimated at $30,000. The building and 15 machines were totally destroyed. The loss is covered by insurance.

Members of the Weirton Fire Department arrived on the scene of the fire too late to check the leaping flames, which had already undermined the entire structure. The fire call, which had been sent by telephone, was not accompanied by an address or location, and the firemen were unable to locate the fire for more than an hour.

A call to Lorell's garage at Main street and Ferguson avenue was received Thursday evening. Fifty gallons of chemicals were used to put out the flames caused by a burning machine. The origin of the fire is being investigated.

COUNTY FARMERS HOLD INSTITUTE

DRIFTING WORKER IS TIME LOSER

Frequent changing of jobs is not approved by C. M. O'Neal, examiner-in-charge of the federal-state employment office, who declares that a great number of the workers lose a third of their time in going from place to place and seeking new jobs.

"There is still a great drift among workers,' says he in his report for October, "especially among miners and common laborers, but it is not so noticeable now as during the summer and early fall. Those who are always changing jobs don't stop to figure what a loss it means to them in dollars and cents. Moreover, the drifting worker is a discontented worker, as a rule, and therefore not a valuable employee."

"Practically all industries of the state are now operating on a full time basis and a great many are adding to present forces of workers to take care of additional business," the report said.

"Opportunities for employment in the state are good, yet I hear the remark, several times each day that jobs are scarce, but these remarks as a rule come from persons when offered a job have some excuse for not taking it and these are the persons that are continually complaining about hard times.

WATER SUPPLIES BEING INSPECTED

Many improvements are being made to assure safe water supplies for the citizens of West Virginia, announces E. S. Tisdale, chief engineer of the division of sanitary engineering of the state department of health. "It is noteworthy," he said, "that several of these have grown out of events, such as floods and serious epidemics which have aroused the people to the realization of the need of a system which will adequately safeguard their health at all times." In keeping with this, the water supplies of Harpers Ferry, Ridgeley and various other places in the eastern part of the state are being inspected at the present time.

LARGE CROWDS AT REVIVAL MEETS

Large crowds continue to attend revival services in the Free Methodist church in charge of the pastor, Rev. A. L. Duncan. Last night his subject was, "The Necessity of Denominations." This evening his topic will be: "Calling Out the Reserves." The public is invited to attend the services which will last two more weeks.

Astronomers Declare Wanderer Headed for Earth is Harmless

MOSCOW — Announcement from the Pulkovski observatory in the Chimea, of the discovery of a new comet apparently headed for the earth has elicited reassurances from the astronomical department of the University of Moscow that the stellar wanderer is quite harmless and will never come nearer than several billion miles of us. The new comet is in the constellation Pisces, and is discernible only with the highest powered telescope.

Its discoverer, Prof. Schein, has established a reputation for bagging comets. This is his second year. According to the Moscow University, an average of five such comets yearly are discovered, most of them fading out of sight within a few days or weeks.

BEAUTY
Gleamy, Thick, Wavy Hair in a Moment

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparable soft, fresh, youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

WEIRTON BLAZE BEING PROBED

Authorities are conducting an investigation into the cause of the fire which recently destroyed the Flint garage in Weirton resulting in a loss estimated at $30,000. The building and 15 machines were totally destroyed. The loss is covered by insurance.

Members of the Weirton Fire Department arrived on the scene of the fire too late to check the leaping flames, which had already undermined the entire structure. The fire call, which had been sent by telephone, was not accompanied by an address or location, and the firemen were unable to locate the fire for more than an hour.

A call to Lorell's garage at Main street and Ferguson avenue was received Thursday evening. Fifty gallons of chemicals were used to put out the flames caused by a burning machine. The origin of the fire is being investigated.

DRIFTING WORKER IS TIME LOSER

Frequent changing of jobs is not approved by C. M. O'Neal, examiner-in-charge of the federal-state employment office, who declares that a great number of the workers lose a third of their time in going from place to place and seeking new jobs.

"There is still a great drift among workers,' says he in his report for October, "especially among miners and common laborers, but it is not so noticeable now as during the summer and early fall. Those who are always changing jobs don't stop to figure what a loss it means to them in dollars and cents. Moreover, the drifting worker is a discontented worker, as a rule, and therefore not a valuable employee."

"Practically all industries of the state are now operating on a full time basis and a great many are adding to present forces of workers to take care of additional business," the report said.

"Opportunities for employment in the state are good, yet I hear the remark, several times each day that jobs are scarce, but these remarks as a rule come from persons when offered a job have some excuse for not taking it and these are the persons that are continually complaining about hard times.

WATER SUPPLIES BEING INSPECTED

Many improvements are being made to assure safe water supplies for the citizens of West Virginia, announces E. S. Tisdale, chief engineer of the division of sanitary engineering of the state department of health. "It is noteworthy," he said, "that several of these have grown out of events, such as floods and serious epidemics which have aroused the people to the realization of the need of a system which will adequately safeguard their health at all times." In keeping with this, the water supplies of Harpers Ferry, Ridgeley and various other places in the eastern part of the state are being inspected at the present time.

REVAMP PERMIT SYSTEM TO CUT LIQUOR SUPPLY

Andrews Investigates Illegal Transportation of Intoxicants.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Another move to cut down the gigantic supply of liquor which goes onto the botleg market was taken today by Gen. L. C. Andrews, prohibition czar, when he directed a complete revamping of the present system.

Thousands of permits which have been issued in many states for the manufacture of wine for home consumption will be revoked outright.

Regulations pertaining to the supply and distribution of medical wine and whisky, and sacramantal liquors will be rewritten to reduce the amount of these intoxicants sold to that required for legitimate use.

Carriers Must File Bonds.

Andrews already has established iron clad regulations for the movement of liquors on railroads, providing that the carriers must file heavy bonds with the prohibition authorities to guarantee protection against law violation.

A general investigation of the illegal transportation of intoxicants by rail is in progress and further steps will be taken by the prohibition office to stop what is believed to be a widespread conspiracy to violate the law.

The industrial alcohol manufacture and distribution system is under reorganization. Operation of regulations already in effect is said to be resulting in at least a partial check on legitimate diversions.

In the study of the prohibition situation Andrews discovered that an enormous number of permits have been issued for the manufacture of home consumption wine in many states. These permits were issued under the old revenue act. A considerable quantity of this liquor is believed to be going onto the bootleg market.

Plan to Stop Leaks.

Andrews has experts studying the sacramental and medicinal liquor situation. No details of possible provisions of the new regulations have been made public, but it was stated that a material reduction in the distribution of these intoxicants will result.

Regulations will be issued soon to stop up many of the leaks. Some minor amendments to the revenue act have been recommended and it is possible that other changes will be suggested to congress.

Responsibility for enforcement of minor infractions of the laws should be assumed by state, county and municipal governments, treasury officials asserted today, replying to the attack on the government's new dry policy by Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon league.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY — BY EDGAR DOE MORRIS

"Yeah, but she'll be happier t-morrer night, when they're really married. Lot can happen before then, y' know."

"Yeah. Wonder what his daughter thinks?"

"You know they don't like it. But what they gonna do? I bet they're afraid of him. You know they said he drove his first wife into thuh streets."

"Wonder what she thinks?"

"I suppose she's heard thuh news. But she should worry—with all that alimony, and Europe to spend it in. Bet she's lookin' around for a dook or somethin'. Central City never did suit her."

"Wonder what her sister thinks?"

"Who? Old Mrs. Harwood's sister? She ain't got no sister, has she?"

"Oh, you mean Bernice Todd. That's what they say. They say she was after him but he got his eyes fixed on her sister."

"Well," Mrs. Long set forth, "their mother won't care, 'slong as it's one of them that's marryin' old Harwood's money. He's got ten million dollars, Gus says. A man at thuh bank that Gus knows told him so."

"Wonder what that fellow she used to go with thinks—that Wyman Holt?"

Mrs. Roester's cackle continued. "Old Harwood must be blind."

"Well, his daughters will watch her. You know they'll ant to get somethin' on her. That married daughter of hisn is older than she is, you know. She's 26, thuh paper says. That makes her six years older than her step-mother." Again both laughed.

"They say her husband's furious. He hoped old Harwood wouldn't remarry. Then there'd be just thuh two daughters to share thuh money."

"I wonder if SHE thinks she'll be happy?"

"Why not? With all that money?"

"Yeah, I guess so." Her eyes rested upon a limousine climbing the hill at a moderate pace. "Look, Josie, that's her now! That's her in the limmysine with her mother. Look!"

A tiny bulb in the hurrying car revealed the severe visage of an elderly woman and a younger figure immediately recognizable as her daughter. It was indeed Mrs. Wellington Todd and her daughter, Laurel, who on the morrow was to wed Noble Harwood. The lips of the daughter were moving. Mrs. Long could see.

"Wish I knew what she's sayin'," Mrs. Long confided.

And if she only could have known!

J. R. SHEA, chief boatswain's mate, 23 years old, of Providence, R. I.

Taylor thought a ninth man lost his life, but in his exhausted condition today he could not say for sure.

Battle Between Life and Death.

His own story was one of a battle of overwhelming odds between life and death fought in Shelburne harbor. Although only a short distance from the town, none could hear nor see them, and none could aid them.

The Morrill, on her way from the Great Lakes to Boston, had put into Shelburne, four days ago, and anchored off the light at Sandy Point, about five miles from the town. Her boat's crew of nine or ten picked men had come to Shelburne, bringing with them a sick comrade who was to have been sent to a hospital at Halifax. They had leave for the day.

Sink One by One.

"Darkness was rapidly closing down," said Taylor. "Our little boat, 26 feet long, had gone about half its distance to our ship, when we were struck by a squall.

"Our boat was immediately capsized. This was in the center of the upper harbor, about three miles from shore, and about two and one-half miles from our ship.

"We seized hold of the overturned boat. The heavy seas tossed us about. We hung on for dear life. We called out for help but, of course, no one could hear us."

The heavy seas seemed to reach at the victims like hands of death and in the darkness snatched them, one by one, from the hulk.

"One by one they sank," said Taylor, tears in his eyes. "Finally there were only two of us left. We looked at each other—our eyes spoke volumes.

"He was my mate, Shea."

Tries to Save Mate.

"Meanwhile our boat was being swept toward shore. The water became shallow. When we came to 100 yards from the shore we threw ourselves clear of the boat and attempted to swim the distance.

"I tried to save Shea, my mate, who was very weak, but I couldn't, and, at last, he went down. Then, half unconscious, I was pounded up against the jagged rocks of the shore. I pulled myself up, slowly, resting at times, to safety."

Taylor was finally able to drag himself to the home of a fisherman. He was given kind-hearted care at the home of Captain Adam Firth. There he told his story.

Crowds of men from Shelburne and nearby points were searching along the beach today in the hope that perhaps one or two of the men with their lifebelts might have drifted ashore alive.

Dogs to match furs are being carried by some women in Paris.

ALGER'S "RAGS TO RICHES" OUTDONE IN REAL LIFE TODAY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—From "Rags to Riches" by Horatio Alger, was outdone in real life today.

It was a true story of big success—how a poor boy has risen from an obscure job to the uppermost position of the firm.

It was the story of George H. Jones. Jones, son of a poor carpenter, began his career with the Standard Oil company 35 years ago as a stenographer, at $60 a month. Today, he is chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, succeeding the late A. C. Bedford, and his salary is $125,000 a year.

Just as in the Alger story books, Jones worked hard and studied hard. He only had a grammar school education. But he made up for this by studying nights, holidays and on Sundays. He made himself invaluable to the company. He steadily mounted the ladder of success.

Now he's at the top.

Al Jolson Is Serious When He Is Drawn Into Rhinelander Case

Blackface Comedian Shows no Inclination Toward Conscious Entertainment as he Denies he Knows Quadroon Bride of Aristocrat.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Al Jolson, blackface comedian, was called to the witness stand today at the trial of the Rhinelander annullment action. The comedian became greatly excited during his testimony and showed no inclination toward conscious entertainment.

"Did you ever have any talk with the defendant,' asked Judge Mills, counsel for Rhinelander, pointing at Alice Jones Rhinelander, quadroon bride of the aristocratic plaintiff.

"Never in my life,' shouted Jolson.

"Did you ever see her?"

"No," shouted Jolson, louder than before. "Can I talk in my own way?" pleaded the comedian excitedly.

Counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander broke in with:

"Thank God for that," breathed Jolson, with the vibrating sob in his voice he is famous for. "That's fine. I can go home and make up with my wife. Those headlines upset me. I never been to Paul Smith's in my life. I've got hotel bills from Atlantic City, proving where I was."

"Well, every time I go into my dressing room in the theater," related Jolson, confidentially, "some one plays 'Alice, where are thou going'."

"I hope I'll eat breakfast at home tomorrow," Jolson shouted as he left the witness stand.

The meteoric entrance and exit of Jolson into the case came from the casual mention of Jolson in letters written by Mrs. Rhinelander to Leonard in 1922. She wrote that while employed as a maid in Paul Smith's hotel in the Adirondacks she met and talked with Jolson to whom she referred as "being some flirt with the girls."

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Confused and stammering under the torture of a merciless cross-examination, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, admitted on the witness stand today that he had sworn to five falsehoods in the papers of his action to annul his marriage to Alice Beatrice Jones on the ground that she had concealed her Negro origin from him.

Rhinelander, gulping laborously under the questioning of Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander, also contradicted his testimony of a few minutes before and said he suspected two years before his marriage that Alice might have had Negro blood in her veins. He had declared previously the first intimation of his bride's color came from newspaper reports in 1924.

She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grafton, who settled in Calcutta after leaving their ancestral home near Harrisburg, Pa. There she was born August 4, 1840, being one of eleven children, eight boys and three girls.

Mrs. Curby was among the oldest members of the Church of Christ and held affiliations with many of its subsidiary organizations. The pastor of the church, Rev. B. R. Johnson, will have charge of the funeral which will be held from her late home on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. He will be assisted by Dr. D. W. MacLeod, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

T. A. McNicol Plant Damaged by Second Fire in Two Months

For the second time within less than two months, fire damaged the plant of the T. A. McNicol pottery, River road, at 3:30 o'clock this morning.

The blaze, which broke out in the roof of the kilnshed, is said to have resulted from an overheated kiln. Firemen from the No. 1 and 2 stations responded to the alarm and extinguished the blaze with chemicals. Only slight damage was done.

Damage estimated at approximately $500 was done to the plant by fire on October 8.

Letters to Editor

East Liverpool, Nov. 17, 1925.

Editor Review-Tribune, East Liverpool, O.

Dear Sir—The suggestion that the assembly room in the Carnegie library be used for the new municipal court was received very favorably by local business men and attorneys.

The present city hall was built many years ago before the days of electric wiring or heating plants. It is a rickety, dilapidated structure and cannot be put in any sort of condition for much less than $3,000. The city has no money in its treasury available for this purpose.

The Carnegie library on the other hand is a fireproof building with a modern heating plant and properly wired for light. The city has already appropriated money for its upkeep. It will be heated and lighted regardless of whether it is used or not. At practically no expense the assembly room can be converted into a very modern up-to-date court room which will be a credit to the city.

Within a few months after the court is in operation it will be on more than a self sustaining basis. It will then probably be able to take over the heating and lighting and janitor service for the whole building. This will be a saving of about $1,000 to $1,200 available to the library trustees for the improvement of the book service.

It would seem to be improvident for the city to go to the expense of wasting the money in the improvement of city hall or of renting other rooms in the city which would not be fireproof and which would have fewer conveniences and with a greater overhead expense, than to use this part of the library, which otherwise would stand idle and be of no practical benefit to the city.

The court will not interfere with the book service of the library. On the contrary it will take many people into the building who have never been there before and will undoubtedly result in increased patronage. The new municipal court is a court of record. All of its proceedings will be orderly and treated with respect. The jail delivery or police court every morning will probably be held by the judge at the city hall.

The municipal court on account of its importance to the community should be properly housed in order that strangers as well as our own people should receive a good impression.

at intervals to discuss thrift, while contests would be conducted to interest the children. The additional cost of conducting this system, to be paid by the depository, would be little more than is now necessary to operate the penny stamp savings system. The new plan would make less work for the teacher, who would not be required to handle stamps.

A committee consisting of Members Weaver and Ferguson and Superintendent McVay will meet with officials of the Potters' Savings and Loan company within the next few days to recommend that this system be adopted.

Seek Basketball Coach.

Upon recommendation of Superintendent McVay, the board approved a plan of allowing so-called "weak" teachers to spend one day in visiting other rooms in order to gather ideas from more efficient instructors regarding their work. Substitute teachers will be employed to take charge of such rooms while the regular instructor is visiting.

Proposed purchase of four new typewriters was deferred until the next meeting of the board in order to obtian bids from other manufacturers.

The clerk was instructed to notify the parents of two children from Madison township, attending the Glenmoor school, that they must pay the tuition fee or withdraw the pupils from the Liverpool district school. The Madison township board assert that the children reside in the Township line school district and that the Madison board will not pay for their tuition in the Glenmoor school.

The board discussed the employment of a high school basketball coach but left the matter in the hands of a committee consisting of Members Weaver and Wilhelm, and Superintendent McVay and Miss Florence Updegraff, high school principal. Superintendent McVay reported that both H. T. Lorah and Albert E. Reed, high school instructors, were experienced coaches Lorah played with the University of Michigan team while in college, while Reed had experience at Circleville before coming to East Liverpool. O. V. Boone, director of physical education and football coach, has expressed his desire to be relieved of coaching the basketball team, feeling that he is not qualified to train a team in this line of sport. Miss Hazel Mast will coach the girl's team.

GLENMOOR HIT BY EPIDEMIC

An epidemic of smallpox and chickenpox, which it is claimed developed in the vicinity of Glenmoor and Ross Meadows, along the Lincoln highway, three miles north of her, a few days ago, has been checked, according to an opinion by officials of the Columbiana county board of health today.

Nine cases of smallpox in three families and five scattering cases of chickenpox, most of them in mild form, are under quarantine. Approximately 60 children, attending the Glenmoore school, were dismissed yesterday upon instructions from county health officials. Most of them, however, were back in school today. About 25 of the children were advised to remain at home for a few days to await developments.

Seven members of the Wilkie Kinsey family—Mrs. Kinsey, the mother, and six children, five of them in school, are suffering from smallpox, according to Gomer Lewis, Lisbon, a representative of the county health board. Another case exists at the home of Wilbur Glenn, his son, Kenneth, 18, being ill. The other case is at the home of William McCartney, where a 15-year-old son is ill. The five cases of chickenpox are scattered in different homes of the district.

Lewis, accompanied by Miss Mary Masters, county health nurse, spent a greater part of Monday in the Glenmoor and Ross Meadow district examining the children who were dismissed from school. None of the youngsters in school showed symptoms of having contracted the disease, but in order to guard against a further spread, children suffering from sore throats and colds were instructed to remain in the house for a few days. The others were ordered to report for school this morning.

County health officials believe that the disease was brought to the city by members of the New Philadelphia football team, who played here a few weeks ago. Several cases of smallpox are said to have been in existence in the Tuscarawas county town for several months. Raymond Kinsey, one of the members of the Kinsey family, suffering from smallpox, is a member of the local high school grid team and played in the contest with New Philadelphia.

Local physicians are treating the patients. Dr. T. T. Church, Salem, county health commissioner, is out of the county and is not expected to return until the latter part of the week.

facts, except some slight evidence that two dresser drawers in the room where the child lay were ransacked."

Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, Allen said, he had left his apartment with Gardner to escort him to his room in another part of the hotel. He then drove his car, outside the hotel, to a garage and returned to his suite, where Mrs. Allen was awaiting him.

They decided to take a look at their baby, he said, and as soon as Mrs. Allen drew the blanket from off the child she screamed and fainted. He found the baby dead, he said.

Miss Caroline Frogren, the nurse, asleep in another room, was awakened by Mrs. Allen's screams and summoned the police. If burglars had entered the place, Captain Naughton said, they must have used a key, as the apartment door was not broken open.

But up to the present we have found the ant the most interestingly suggestive creature. He has developed and understands stirpiculture—the improvement of the race by careful breeding—which with us is as yet mere theory, and as we look down at the ant, we look up to him because the strangely active creature manages to do without sleep.

We human being drowse through 30 years of our three-score and ten, but the ant is awake and working all the time.

If the ant has managed to live without sleep, if he has acquired the faculty of lifelong wakefulness, why should we not do as much in time? We take it for granted that sleep is essential, as we take everything else for granted. We used to take it for granted that the earth was flat, but we have stopped that. Sleep was at one time forced upon man and other animals.

The aerth in its rollings turned away from the sun once in every 24 hours. In the darkness of the beginning man said to himself: "If I go walking around, I shall fall into a hole, so I shall lie down and wait until the sun comes again."

He did as all the animals did before him for millions of years. Since that time, man has conquered darkness. Why should he not ultimately conquer sleep?"

We know that thin men, nervous, highly organized do with far less sleep the n others. We know that old age requires less sleep than youth.

Can we not cultivate and develop the characteristics which make sleep less necessary? Higher races of apes have abolished tails. Can't we abolish sleep?

As old age needs less sleep than babyhood, so in our maturity as a human race we shall probably demand less sleep than now in our racial babyhood. Perhaps none at all will be needed.

If that happens our lives will be doubled in value, they will be complete. The hours of sunlight will be devoted to examination and admiration of nature's beauties on this earth.

The hours of darkness, given up to sleep no longer, will be devoted to the study of space to investigation among other worlds.

That kind of life will be worth while. Bear in mind that we shall only really begin to live on this earth when we shall have settled all the little social and material questions here and shall have begun in earnest the study of the universe in which we are a speck.

The days of the future will be given up to artistic enjoyment of the beautiful. The nights will be devoted to intellectual development and research.

Man will live.

Mitchell Witness Testifies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — While the lives of American aviators are constantly endangered by lack of adequate forecasts, the war department has refused to erect meteorological stations as a safeguard to the army's model airways, Lieut. Donald G. Duke, chief of army airways, testified today at the court-martial of Col William Mitchell.

Requests for radio weather stations at Cumberland, Md.; Uniontown, Pa.; Dallas, Texas, and Muskogee, Okla., were turned down, Duke said, on the ground there were "insufficient funds." The projects were demanded by the air service, he added, to meet an emergency and to prevent loss of life and property.

The war department's attitude, Duke said, provoked the army air service to describe the action as "economy practiced at the price of safety to lives and property."

REVAMP PERMIT SYSTEM TO CUT LIQUOR SUPPLY

Andrews Investigates Illegal Transportation of Intoxicants.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Another move to cut down the gigantic supply of liquor which goes onto the botleg market was taken today by Gen. L. C. Andrews, prohibition czar, when he directed a complete revamping of the present system.

Thousands of permits which have been issued in many states for the manufacture of wine for home consumption will be revoked outright.

Regulations pertaining to the supply and distribution of medical wine and whisky, and sacramantal liquors will be rewritten to reduce the amount of these intoxicants sold to that required for legitimate use.

Carriers Must File Bonds.

Andrews already has established iron clad regulations for the movement of liquors on railroads, providing that the carriers must file heavy bonds with the prohibition authorities to guarantee protection against law violation.

A general investigation of the illegal transportation of intoxicants by rail is in progress and further steps will be taken by the prohibition office to stop what is believed to be a widespread conspiracy to violate the law.

The industrial alcohol manufacture and distribution system is under reorganization. Operation of regulations already in effect is said to be resulting in at least a partial check on legitimate diversions.

In the study of the prohibition situation Andrews discovered that an enormous number of permits have been issued for the manufacture of home consumption wine in many states. These permits were issued under the old revenue act. A considerable quantity of this liquor is believed to be going onto the bootleg market.

Plan to Stop Leaks.

Andrews has experts studying the sacramental and medicinal liquor situation. No details of possible provisions of the new regulations have been made public, but it was stated that a material reduction in the distribution of these intoxicants will result.

Regulations will be issued soon to stop up many of the leaks. Some minor amendments to the revenue act have been recommended and it is possible that other changes will be suggested to congress.

Responsibility for enforcement of minor infractions of the laws should be assumed by state, county and municipal governments, treasury officials asserted today, replying to the attack on the government's new dry policy by Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon league.

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY — BY EDGAR POE NORRIS

"Yeah, but she'll be happier t-morrer night, when they're really married. Lot can happen before then, y' know."

"Yeah. Wonder what his daughter thinks?"

"You know they don't like it. But what they gonna do? I bet they're afraid of him. You know they said he drove his first wife into thuh streets."

"Wonder what she thinks?"

"I suppose she's heard thuh news. But she should worry—with all that alimony, and Europe to spend it in. Bet she's lookin' around for a dook or somethin'. Central City never did suit her."

"Wonder what her sister thinks?"

"Who? Old Mrs. Harwood's sister? She ain't got no sister, has she?"

"Oh, you mean Bernice Todd. That's what they say. They say she was after him but he got his eyes fixed on her sister."

"Well," Mrs. Long set forth, "their mother won't care, 'slong as it's one of them that's marryin' old Harwood's money. He's got ten million dollars, Gus says. A man at thuh bank that Gus knows told him so."

"It's nearer twenty million dollars, some say."

"Wonder what that fellow she used to go with thinks—that Wyman Holt?"

Mrs. Roester's cackle continued. "Old Harwood must be blind."

"Well, his daughters will watch her. You know they'll ant to get somethin' on her. That married daughter of hisn is older than she is, you know. She's 26, thuh paper says. That makes her six years older than her step-mother." Again both laughed.

"They say her husband's furious. He hoped old Harwood wouldn't remarry. Then there'd be just thuh two daughters to share thuh money."

"I wonder if SHE thinks she'll be happy?"

"Why not? With all that money?"

"Yeah, I guess so." Her eyes rested upon a limousine climbing the hill at a moderate pace. "Look, Josie, that's her now! That's her in the limmysine with her mother. Look!"

A tiny bulb in the hurrying car revealed the severe visage of an elderly woman and a younger figure immediately recognizable as her daughter. It was indeed Mrs. Wellington Todd and her daughter, Laurel, who on the morrow was to wed Noble Harwood. The lips of the daughter were moving. Mrs. Long could see.

"Wish I knew what she's sayin'," Mrs. Long confided.

And if she only could have known!

J. R. SHEA, chief boatswain's mate, 23 years old, of Providence, R. I.

Taylor thought a ninth man lost his life, but in his exhausted condition today he could not say for sure.

Battle Between Life and Death.

His own story was one of a battle of overwhelming odds between life and death fought in Shelburne harbor. Although only a short distance from the town, none could hear nor see them, and none could aid them.

The Morrill, on her way from the Great Lakes to Boston, had put into Shelburne, four days ago, and anchored off the light at Sandy Point, about five miles from the town. Her boat's crew of nine or ten picked men had come to Shelburne, bringing with them a sick comrade who was to have been sent to a hospital at Halifax. They had leave for the day.

Sink One by One.

"Darkness was rapidly closing down," said Taylor. "Our little boat, 26 feet long, had gone about half its distance to our ship, when we were struck by a squall.

"Our boat was immediately capsized. This was in the center of the upper harbor, about three miles from shore, and about two and one-half miles from our ship.

"We seized hold of the overturned boat. The heavy seas tossed us about. We hung on for dear life. We called out for help but, of course, no one could hear us."

The heavy seas seemed to reach at the victims like hands of death and in the darkness snatched them, one by one, from the hulk.

"One by one they sank," said Taylor, tears in his eyes. "Finally there were only two of us left. We looked at each other—our eyes spoke volumes.

"He was my mate, Shea."

Tries to Save Mate.

"Meanwhile our boat was being swept toward shore. The water became shallow. When we came to 100 yards from the shore we threw ourselves clear of the boat and attempted to swim the distance.

"I tried to save Shea, my mate, who was very weak, but I couldn't, and, at last, he went down. Then, half unconscious, I was pounded up against the jagged rocks of the shore. I pulled myself up, slowly, resting at times, to safety."

Taylor was finally able to drag himself to the home of a fisherman. He was given kind-hearted care at the home of Captain Adam Firth. There he told his story.

Crowds of men from Shelburne and nearby points were searching along the beach today in the hope that perhaps one or two of the men with their lifebelts might have drifted ashore alive.

ALGER'S "RAGS TO RICHES" OUTDONE IN REAL LIFE TODAY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—From "Rags to Riches" by Horatio Alger, was outdone in real life today.

It was a true story of big success—how a poor boy has risen from an obscure job to the uppermost position of the firm.

It was the story of George H. Jones. Jones, son of a poor carpenter, began his career with the Standard Oil company 35 years ago as a stenographer, at $60 a month. Today, he is chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, succeeding the late A. C. Bedford, and his salary is $125,000 a year.

Just as in the Alger story books, Jones worked hard and studied hard. He only had a grammar school education. But he made up for this by studying nights, holidays and on Sundays. He made himself invaluable to the company. He steadily mounted the ladder of success.

Al Jolson Is Serious When He Is Drawn Into Rhinelander Case

Blackface Comedian Shows no Inclination Toward Conscious Entertainment as he Denies he Knows Quadroon Bride of Aristocrat.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Al Jolson, blackface comedian, was called to the witness stand today at the trial of the Rhinelander annullment action. The comedian became greatly excited during his testimony and showed no inclination toward conscious entertainment.

"Did you ever have any talk with the defendant,' asked Judge Mills, counsel for Rhinelander, pointing at Alice Jones Rhinelander, quadroon bride of the aristocratic plaintiff.

"Never in my life,' shouted Jolson.

"Did you ever see her?"

"No," shouted Jolson, louder than before. "Can I talk in my own way?" pleaded the comedian excitedly.

"Thank God for that," breathed Jolson, with the vibrating sob in his voice he is famous for. "That's fine. I can go home and make up with my wife. Those headlines upset me. I never been to Paul Smith's in my life. I've got hotel bills from Atlantic City, proving where I was."

The meteoric entrance and exit of Jolson into the case came from the casual mention of Jolson in letters written by Mrs. Rhinelander to Leonard in 1922. She wrote that while employed as a maid in Paul Smith's hotel in the Adirondacks she met and talked with Jolson to whom she referred as "being some flirt with the girls."

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Confused and stammering under the torture of a merciless cross-examination, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, admitted on the witness stand today that he had sworn to five falsehoods in the papers of his action to annul his marriage to Alice Beatrice Jones on the ground that she had concealed her Negro origin from him.

Rhinelander, gulping laborously under the questioning of Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander, also contradicted his testimony of a few minutes before and said he suspected two years before his marriage that Alice might have had Negro blood in her veins. He had declared previously the first intimation of his bride's color came from newspaper reports in 1924.

Letters to Editor

East Liverpool, Nov. 17, 1925.

Editor Review-Tribune, East Liverpool, O.

Dear Sir—The suggestion that the assembly room in the Carnegie library be used for the new municipal court was received very favorably by local business men and attorneys.

The present city hall was built many years ago before the days of electric wiring or heating plants. It is a rickety, dilapidated structure and cannot be put in any sort of condition for much less than $3,000. The city has no money in its treasury available for this purpose.

The Carnegie library on the other hand is a fireproof building with a modern heating plant and properly wired for light. The city has already appropriated money for its upkeep. It will be heated and lighted regardless of whether it is used or not. At practically no expense the assembly room can be converted into a very modern up-to-date court room which will be a credit to the city.

Within a few months after the court is in operation it will be on more than a self sustaining basis. It will then probably be able to take over the heating and lighting and janitor service for the whole building. This will be a saving of about $1,000 to $1,200 available to the library trustees for the improvement of the book service.

It would seem to be improvident for the city to go to the expense of wasting the money in the improvement of city hall or of renting other rooms in the city which would not be fireproof and which would have fewer conveniences and with a greater overhead expense, than to use this part of the library, which otherwise would stand idle and be of no practical benefit to the city.

The court will not interfere with the book service of the library. On the contrary it will take many people into the building who have never been there before and will undoubtedly result in increased patronage. The new municipal court is a court of record. All of its proceedings will be orderly and treated with respect. The jail delivery or police court every morning will probably be held by the judge at the city hall.

The municipal court on account of its importance to the community should be properly housed in order that strangers as well as our own people should receive a good impression.

at intervals to discuss thrift, while contests would be conducted to interest the children. The additional cost of conducting this system, to be paid by the depository, would be little more than is now necessary to operate the penny stamp savings system. The new plan would make less work for the teacher, who would not be required to handle stamps.

A committee consisting of Members Weaver and Ferguson and Superintendent McVay will meet with officials of the Potters' Savings and Loan company within the next few days to recommend that this system be adopted.

Seek Basketball Coach.

Upon recommendation of Superintendent McVay, the board approved a plan of allowing so-called "weak" teachers to spend one day in visiting other rooms in order to gather ideas from more efficient instructors regarding their work. Substitute teachers will be employed to take charge of such rooms while the regular instructor is visiting.

The clerk was instructed to notify the parents of two children from Madison township, attending the Glenmoor school, that they must pay the tuition fee or withdraw the pupils from the Liverpool district school. The Madison township board assert that the children reside in the Township line school district and that the Madison board will not pay for their tuition in the Glenmoor school.

The board discussed the employment of a high school basketball coach but left the matter in the hands of a committee consisting of Members Weaver and Wilhelm, and Superintendent McVay and Miss Florence Updegraff, high school principal. Superintendent McVay reported that both H. T. Lorah and Albert E. Reed, high school instructors, were experienced coaches. Lorah played with the University of Michigan team while in college, while Reed had experience at Circleville before coming to East Liverpool. O. V. Boone, director of physical education and football coach, has expressed his desire to be relieved of coaching the basketball team, feeling that he is not qualified to train a team in this line of sport. Miss Hazel Mast will coach the girl's team.

GLENMOOR HIT BY EPIDEMIC

An epidemic of smallpox and chickenpox, which it is claimed developed in the vicinity of Glenmoor and Ross Meadows, along the Lincoln highway, three miles north of her, a few days ago, has been checked, according to an opinion by officials of the Columbiana county board of health today.

Nine cases of smallpox in three families and five scattering cases of chickenpox, most of them in mild form, are under quarantine. Approximately 60 children, attending the Glenmoore school, were dismissed yesterday upon instructions from county health officials. Most of them, however, were back in school today. About 25 of the children were advised to remain at home for a few days to await developments.

Seven members of the Wilkie Kinsey family—Mrs. Kinsey, the mother, and six children, five of them in school, are suffering from smallpox, according to Gomer Lewis, Lisbon, a representative of the county health board. Another case exists at the home of Wilbur Glenn, his son, Kenneth, 18, being ill. The other case is at the home of William McCartney, where a 15-year-old son is ill. The five cases of chickenpox are scattered in different homes of the district.

Lewis, accompanied by Miss Mary Masters, county health nurse, spent a greater part of Monday in the Glenmoor and Ross Meadow district examining the children who were dismissed from school. None of the youngsters in school showed symptoms of having contracted the disease, but in order to guard against a further spread, children suffering from sore throats and colds were instructed to remain in the house for a few days. The others were ordered to report for school this morning.

County health officials believe that the disease was brought to the city by members of the New Philadelphia football team, who played here a few weeks ago. Several cases of smallpox are said to have been in existence in the Tuscarawas county town for several months. Raymond Kinsey, one of the members of the Kinsey family, suffering from smallpox, is a member of the local high school grid team and played in the contest with New Philadelphia.

Local physicians are treating the patients. Dr. T. T. Church, Salem, county health commissioner, is out of the county and is not expected to return until the latter part of the week.

Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, Allen said, he had left his apartment with Gardner to escort him to his room in another part of the hotel. He then drove his car, outside the hotel, to a garage and returned to his suite, where Mrs. Allen was awaiting him.

They decided to take a look at their baby, he said, and as soon as Mrs. Allen drew the blanket from off the child she screamed and fainted. He found the baby dead, he said.

Miss Caroline Frogren, the nurse, asleep in another room, was awakened by Mrs. Allen's screams and summoned the police. If burglars had entered the place, Captain Naughton said, they must have used a key, as the apartment door was not broken open.

But up to the present we have found the ant the most interestingly suggestive creature. He has developed and understands stirpiculture—the improvement of the race by careful breeding—which with us is as yet mere theory, and as we look down at the ant, we look up to him because the strangely active creature manages to do without sleep.

We human being drowse through 30 years of our three-score and ten, but the ant is awake and working all the time.

If the ant has managed to live without sleep, if he has acquired the faculty of lifelong wakefulness, why should we not do as much in time? We take it for granted that sleep is essential, as we take everything else for granted. We used to take it for granted that the earth was flat, but we have stopped that. Sleep was at one time forced upon man and other animals.

The aerth in its rollings turned away from the sun once in every 24 hours. In the darkness of the beginning man said to himself: "If I go walking around, I shall fall into a hole, so I shall lie down and wait until the sun comes again."

He did as all the animals did before him for millions of years. Since that time, man has conquered darkness. Why should he not ultimately conquer sleep?"

We know that thin men, nervous, highly organized do with far less sleep the n others. We know that old age requires less sleep than youth.

Can we not cultivate and develop the characteristics which make sleep less necessary? Higher races of apes have abolished tails. Can't we abolish sleep?

As old age needs less sleep than babyhood, so in our maturity as a human race we shall probably demand less sleep than now in our racial babyhood. Perhaps none at all will be needed.

If that happens our lives will be doubled in value, they will be complete. The hours of sunlight will be devoted to examination and admiration of nature's beauties on this earth.

The hours of darkness, given up to sleep no longer, will be devoted to the study of space to investigation among other worlds.

That kind of life will be worth while. Bear in mind that we shall only really begin to live on this earth when we shall have settled all the little social and material questions here and shall have begun in earnest the study of the universe in which we are a speck.

The days of the future will be given up to artistic enjoyment of the beautiful. The nights will be devoted to intellectual development and research.

Man will live.

Mitchell Witness Testifies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17. — While the lives of American aviators are constantly endangered by lack of adequate forecasts, the war department has refused to erect meteorological stations as a safeguard to the army's model airways, Lieut. Donald G. Duke, chief of army airways, testified today at the court-martial of Col William Mitchell.

Requests for radio weather stations at Cumberland, Md.; Uniontown, Pa.; Dallas, Texas, and Muskogee, Okla., were turned down, Duke said, on the ground there were "insufficient funds." The projects were demanded by the air service, he added, to meet an emergency and to prevent loss of life and property.

The war department's attitude, Duke said, provoked the army air service to describe the action as "economy practiced at the price of safety to lives and property."

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

RELIEVED PAIN AND SWELLING OVERNIGHT

Long-standing case of rheumatism helped in a few hours

After having suffered with rheumatism for years, and tried all kinds of remedies in vain, thousands of people have at last found a way to get quick, sure relief.

"I have been a sufferer from rheumatism for years," writes one woman from Washington, D. C. "At times my hands are terribly swollen. Sloan's always gives me relief in a very short time. I have tried other liniments, but nothing equals Sloan's."

The marvelous effectiveness of Sloan's is due to its stimulating effect upon the circulation. Straight to the sick, aching tissues, it sends a healing tide of fresh new blood — clears out rheumatism germs—kills pain.

So pleasant and clean to use, too. You don't even have to rub. Just pat it on gently and you will get immediate results. All druggists—35 cents.

The Park & Pollard Co. have been making and feeding LAY or BUST Dry-Mash for nearly thirty years. It was the only dry-mash on the market when they first started selling it. No feed has been so widely imitated. The agricultural colleges have copied the idea and provided formulas to take its place but in their endeavor to provide a ration that will not cost as much fall down in the final results.

Do not pay more for the imitators have never equalled the quality; and do not pay less and lose in egg production and in the hatchability of the eggs during the spring months.

Full satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. When there is a better mash made The Park & Pollard name will be on it.

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

The marvelous effectiveness of Sloan's is due to its stimulating effect upon the circulation. Straight to the sick, aching tissues, it sends a healing tide of fresh new blood — clears out rheumatism germs—kills pain.

So pleasant and clean to use, too. You don't even have to rub. Just pat it on gently and you will get immediate results. All druggists—35 cents.

The Park & Pollard Co. have been making and feeding LAY or BUST Dry-Mash for nearly thirty years. It was the only dry-mash on the market when they first started selling it. No feed has been so widely imitated. The agricultural colleges have copied the idea and provided formulas to take its place but in their endeavor to provide a ration that will not cost as much fall down in the final results.

Do not pay more for the imitators have never equalled the quality; and do not pay less and lose in egg production and in the hatchability of the eggs during the spring months.

Full satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. When there is a better mash made The Park & Pollard name will be on it.

FRANCE MECCA FOR LABORERS ON CONTINENT

Higher Pay and Plenty of Work are Magnets.

PARIS IS BUSY

Failure to Settle Debt Problem May Cause Reaction.

WASHINGTON.—Foreign laborers make up about 1,500,000 of the population of France, according to information obtained by the department of Commerce.

With most of the other nations of Europe, particularly Great Britain and Italy, in far from satisfactory economic position, France is becoming the great workhouse of the continent. Better wages, plenty of work and other factors are forming a great magnet to draw European labor to the French nation.

Contrasted with France's excellent domestic business prosperity, her government is far from the solvency which marks those of Great Britain and Italy, officials said. The latter countries have built up solid finances in the central government, by budget balancing and currency stabilization, while France, letting these governmental functions go into the discard, so far has established a business situation probably better than any other nation in Europe.

Forsee Reaction

Failure of the French debt negotiations in Washington so far have not affected France's economic position, but officials feel that not far in the future a definite reaction will start unless a funding agreement is reached with the United States and Great Britain.

Well-informed economists point out that French industry is already feeling the need of financing—that to continue in its present success and to compete in the world-wide trade war which is on in earnest, there must be currency stabilization, better credit ratings and balanced budgets in Paris.

"The influx of laborers into France from other European countries which has been in progress ever since the Armistice, continues unchecked," E. A. Masuret, of the Commercial Attache's office in Paris, has informed the department of Commerce.

"The total working population from other countries is about 1,500,000, most of whom came from Central Europe. In 1924 the total number admitted was 239,355, while 47,752 left France. Industrial laborers predominate as shown by the record of 197,196 in 1924, as against 42,189 agricultural workers.

Mostly Poles, Italians.

"The introduction of foreign industrial workers into France is authorized only when they have a labor contract which has been vised by the minister of Labor for industrial or by the minister of Agraculture for the farm workers, an investigation being made in each case as to whether the admission of these workers will prejudice employment among the native laboring population.'

Masuret says that there is employment for practically every available workman in France at the present time. This contrasts with over a million unemployed in Great Britain.

STATE BOUNDARY LINES AT FAULT

Washington, D. C.—"Work recently begun to check up the condition of monuments marking the straight line boundary between New York and Pennsylvania, and to find how far the line varies from its proper position, brings to attention only one of the scores of 'boundary skeletons' in the national closet," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"It is probably safe to say that not one of the forty-eight states is now administering exactly the territory which supposedly belongs to it," continues the bulletin. "In some cases the differences are only matters of hundreds or thousands of acres, but in others they must be measured by hundreds of square miles. These faulty boundaries are for the most part accepted now, especially in the states longest settled; but the agreements have not all been reached quietly. There have been scores of disputes between neighboring states and territories, dozens of lawsuits have been brought before the Supreme court, and in one or two cases bitterness has been so great that civil war has seemed on the verge of breaking out.

"The chief difficulty is in drawing straight lines. Anyone can draw a straight line on a piece of paper. He can construct a reasonably straight edged flower bed or driveway. But try to lay out a straight line some miles or hundreds of miles long on the face of the earth, over hill and dale, valley and mountain, and you are faced by a vastly more difficult problem.

"Many of the supposedly east and west lines between the colonies, later inherited as boundaries by the states, were laid out with no other instrument than the magnetic compass. The direction in which the needle pointed varied as the surveyor advanced; but in some cases no account was taken of this, and in others inaccurate corrections were applied. The lines, instead of being straight and running in a true east and west direction, were traced somewhat like rail fences between their terminal points, or struck off from the true direction at an angle and had to be brought back at intervals by offsets.

Plumb Lines Cause Errors.

"Later when better instruments, astronomical methods, and higher mathematics were used the errors in running boundary lines were greatly reduced. An absolutely accurate line hundreds of miles long through rough country has never yet been marked out on the earth's surface, however, and probably never will be—chiefly because surveying instruments depend on plumb line or spirit level to establish perpendiculars, and these indicators vary with differences in density of the rocks from place to place. The closest approach to accuracy has been made by the 'triangulation system,' which the United States coast and geodetic survey has extended over a great part of the United States. Errors still crop up, but they are almost negligible. It is this triangulation system which has disclosed many of the rather glaring inaccuracies of the earlier boundary surveys.

"A number of boundary difficulties have arisen because of mistakes in geography. Thus the first boundary treaty between Great Britain and the United States in 1782 provided that the northern boundary of the United States should run from Lake of the Woods 'on a due west course to the river Mississippi'—a physical impossibility. This error had to be adjusted later but the tiny projection of United States territory into Canada at the 95th meridian—like the sight on a rifle barrel—is a monument to the mistake.

"Another error that led to trouble was the belief that an east-west line through the southern extremity of Lake Michigan would cut Lake Erie at or north of the latter's western end. The extension of Indiana and Ohio several miles north of this old east-west line testifies to the correction that had to be made. The shifting of the Ohio line north, incidentally, was one of the boundary matters that came near causing civil war. Militia from both Ohio and Michigan were mobilized near the disputed territory in 1835 and bloodshed was avoided by the narrowest margin.

"One of the most peculiar state boundaries in the United States is the northern line of Delaware, which is the arc of a circle nicked out of the southeastern corner of Pennsylvania. Laying out the Delaware boundaries was a rather difficult problem in geometry and surveying combined. While the north line is an arc of a circle drawn from the center of the town of Newcastle with a twelve mile radius, the west line is in the main a tangent to the circle from the midpoint of a base line in the south between the Atlantic ocean and Chesapeake bay.

Mason and Dixon Line.

"No boundary line is more famous than the 'Mason and Dixon line,' which divides the North and the South. It is the southern boundary of Pennsylvania and the northern boundary of Maryland. It takes its name from Jeremiah Mason and Charles Dixon, two famous mathematicians sent from England to survey the boundary. The line established by Mason and Dixon is probably more nearly accurate than any of the other east-west boundaries run in the eastern United States.

"In contrast to the Mason and Dixon line is the long east-west line forming the southern boundaries of Virginia and Kentucky between the Atlantic ocean and the Mississippi river. This line is supposed to lie along a parallel of latitude at 36 degrees 30 minutes north. The line as laid out is probably north of this parallel throughout practically its entire course. Where it cuts the Tennessee river it is about 20 miles too far north. At this point there is an offset to the south and the short stretch between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers is approximately on the theoretical parallel. The southern boundary of Tennessee is only less inaccurate than the northern. It dodges both north and south of its supposed location along the 35th parallel.

"North Carolina is among the states suffering the greatest losses on account of boundary errors. Its diagonal boundary with South Carolina is supposed to extend to the 35th parallel before turning west. It actually makes the turn 10 miles short of the goal, then jumps 12 miles north of the parallel and continues west. The net loss of territory to the state is estimated at between 500 and 1,000 square miles."

Conscience Money

Logansport, Ind.—B. H. Hudson, superintendent of the Logansport division of the Pennsylvania railroad here, has received $100 conscience money for the railroad company. The note attached to the money explained that the sender had kept the amount in his possession for years, but did not disclose the manner in which he had obtained it.

Resort to Caves

Tokyo.—Reports from Seoul, Korea, state that more than 3,000 residents of that place are dwelling in caves just as their ancestors did in a primitive age. It is believed that most of these cave-dwellers are members of the poverty-stricken, unemployed class.

In contrast to deficits shown in previous years, the state railways of Italy this year boast of a net income of $7,000,000.

It seems to us as though the management erred in not playing last Saturday's football game under the rules for water polo.—Marion Star.

Agricultural Outlook In Ohio Encouraging According to Reports

COLUMBUS—Ohio farmers are facing an era of prosperity.

That, briefly, is the United States government's summary of the agricultural outlook in the state.

C. J. West, federal crop statistician, from data compiled in all sections of the state, says that genreal conditions are somewhat better than last year.

Dairymen and live stock interests are also facing better prospects.

"A good corn crop in Ohio is always indicative of prosperity," West said. "The crop is good this year. This insures an abundant supply of feed. A big percentage of the corn crop is marketed through feeding on the farm, and as live stock prices are satisfactory, the corn thus used will bring dollars into the pockets of Ohio farmers."

West also pointed out that the big cotton crop in the south is beneficial to the live stock industry, as a plentiful supply of cottonseed meal will be available at moderate prices.

Although the early potato crop was somewhat less than in former years, the late supply is better and is bringing a higher price. This means that growers will recuperate their early losses on the late yield.

Potatoes are always a big item in the United States. When the national supply is less than 400,000,000 bushels the demand is big enough to push up prices. The supply this years is less than 350,000,000 bushels, which accounts for the present high price.

West predicted that potato prices would not fall below the present level and said that a gradual rise could be expected.

During an election at Ennis, Ireland, this fall, one ballot box was taken thirty miles to a polling place, guarded through the day, then was sealed and taken back to the courthouse to be opened and reveal that not a vote had been placed in it.

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on any aching corn, callus, or "hardskin" on bottom of feet. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

STOP ITCHING ECZEMA

Penetrating, Antiseptic Zemo Will Help You.

Never mind how often you have tried and failed, you can stop burning, itching Eczema quickly by applying Zemo. In a short time usually every trace of Eczema, Tetter, Pimples, Rash, Blackheads and similar skin diseases will be removed.

For clearing the skin and making it vigorously healthy, always use Zemo, the penetrating, antiseptic liquid. It is the one dependable treatment for skin troubles of all kinds. All druggists.

FOUR out of FIVE are caught

IT'S sheer carelessness to let pyorrhea cause trouble in your mouth. Yet your dentist knows that four out of five past forty, and many younger, suffer from this serious gum disorder.

It begins with tender bleeding gums. Soon the teeth loosen in their sockets and the poison spreads through the system, causing rheumatism, neuritis, and other similar diseases.

Give Your Dentist a chance

Forhan's for the Gums is the simple, easy way to keep you out of pyorrhea's clutches. It's a pleasant dentifrice that firms the gums and gives the teeth a thorough cleansing. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid which has been used by dentists for the last 15 years in the treatment of pyorrhea.

If used regularly and in time, Forhan's prevents or checks pyorrhea and so is an important safeguard to health. Begin today to use Forhan's night and morning as a wise precaution. All druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

Too many wait until an aching tooth forces them into the dentist's chair. It is folly to suffer this needless pain when all you have to do is to give your dentist a chance to prevent trouble in your mouth by visiting him at least twice a year for a thorough teeth and gums inspection.

CREEK INDIANS USED NO JAILS

Lash and Gun Constituted Only Penalties.

Okmulgee, Okla.—The ancient whipping tree and the old capitol of a vanished Indian nation still are doing service in this city.

In the heart of Okmulgee stands the council house of the Creek nation, erected in 1878. The Young Men's Christian association and the chamber of commerce have their headquarters in the building, and a bus line uses one corner for an office.

The building and its grounds occupy a block in the center of the business district. Among the numerous trees on the grounds are two where the executions and the legal whippings took place.

The Creeks had no jails. They had only two methods of punishment—whipping and shooting. The punishment for robbery, for instance, was 50 lashes for the first offense, 100 lashes for the second, and death for the third. In cases of execution, the condemned Indian was tied to the tree and shot.

Damage suits were settled in cash, work or 50 lashes on the bare back.

The council house is a two-story building of native sandstone. On the first floor were the departments of government; on the second, the legislative halls.

The Creeks were one of the five civilized tribes moved by the government from the southeastern part of the United States to this territory about 1830.

They established here a complete system of government, similar to the American republic, but with much simpler forms.

Their legislature was composed of the "house of kings" (senate) and the "house of warriors." The head of the state was the principal chief, elected for four years by a majority vote of the males of the nation. His assistant was the second chief elected in the same manner.

There was a high court and a district court, each district having a prosecuting attorney, a judge and a company of light horsemen, who were in the nature of mounted police.

The council house belongs to the city of Okmulgee. Efforts are now being made among the remaining Indians to move the building to a national Indian park planned near here.

STATE BOUNDARY LINES AT FAULT

Washington, D. C.—"Work recently begun to check up the condition of monuments marking the straight line boundary between New York and Pennsylvania, and to find how far the line varies from its proper position, brings to attention only one of the scores of 'boundary skeletons' in the national closet," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"It is probably safe to say that not one of the forty-eight states is now administering exactly the territory which supposedly belongs to it," continues the bulletin. "In some cases the differences are only matters of hundreds or thousands of acres, but in others they must be measured by hundreds of square miles. These faulty boundaries are for the most part accepted now, especially in the states longest settled; but the agreements have not all been reached quietly. There have been scores of disputes between neighboring states and territories, dozens of lawsuits have been brought before the Supreme court, and in one or two cases bitterness has been so great that civil war has seemed on the verge of breaking out.

"The chief difficulty is in drawing straight lines. Anyone can draw a straight line on a piece of paper. He can construct a reasonably straight edged flower bed or driveway. But try to lay out a straight line some miles or hundreds of miles long on the face of the earth, over hill and dale, valley and mountain, and you are faced by a vastly more difficult problem.

"Many of the supposedly east and west lines between the colonies, later inherited as boundaries by the states, were laid out with no other instrument than the magnetic compass. The direction in which the needle pointed varied as the surveyor advanced; but in some cases no account was taken of this, and in others inaccurate corrections were applied. The lines, instead of being straight and running in a true east and west direction, were traced somewhat like rail fences between their terminal points, or struck off from the true direction at an angle and had to be brought back at intervals by offsets.

Plumb Lines Cause Errors.

"Later when better instruments, astronomical methods, and higher mathematics were used the errors in running boundary lines were greatly reduced. An absolutely accurate line hundreds of miles long through rough country has never yet been marked out on the earth's surface, however, and probably never will be—chiefly because surveying instruments depend on plumb line or spirit level to establish perpendiculars, and these indicators vary with differences in density of the rocks from place to place. The closest approach to accuracy has been made by the 'triangulation system,' which the United States coast and geodetic survey has extended over a great part of the United States. Errors still crop up, but they are almost negligible. It is this triangulation system which has disclosed many of the rather glaring inaccuracies of the earlier boundary surveys.

"A number of boundary difficulties have arisen because of mistakes in geography. Thus the first boundary treaty between Great Britain and the United States in 1782 provided that the northern boundary of the United States should run from Lake of the Woods 'on a due west course to the river Mississippi'—a physical impossibility. This error had to be adjusted later but the tiny projection of United States territory into Canada at the 95th meridian—like the sight on a rifle barrel—is a monument to the mistake.

"Another error that led to trouble was the belief that an east-west line through the southern extremity of Lake Michigan would cut Lake Erie at or north of the latter's western end. The extension of Indiana and Ohio several miles north of this old east-west line testifies to the correction that had to be made. The shifting of the Ohio line north, incidentally, was one of the boundary matters that came near causing civil war. Militia from both Ohio and Michigan were mobilized near the disputed territory in 1835 and bloodshed was avoided by the narrowest margin.

"One of the most peculiar state boundaries in the United States is the northern line of Delaware, which is the arc of a circle nicked out of the southeastern corner of Pennsylvania. Laying out the Delaware boundaries was a rather difficult problem in geometry and surveying combined. While the north line is an arc of a circle drawn from the center of the town of Newcastle with a twelve mile radius, the west line is in the main a tangent to the circle from the midpoint of a base line in the south between the Atlantic ocean and Chesapeake bay.

Mason and Dixon Line.

"No boundary line is more famous than the 'Mason and Dixon line,' which divides the North and the South. It is the southern boundary of Pennsylvania and the northern boundary of Maryland. It takes its name from Jeremiah Mason and Charles Dixon, two famous mathematicians sent from England to survey the boundary. The line established by Mason and Dixon is probably more nearly accurate than any of the other east-west boundaries run in the eastern United States.

"In contrast to the Mason and Dixon line is the long east-west line forming the southern boundaries of Virginia and Kentucky between the Atlantic ocean and the Mississippi river. This line is supposed to lie along a parallel of latitude at 36 degrees 30 minutes north. The line as laid out is probably north of this parallel throughout practically its entire course. Where it cuts the Tennessee river it is about 20 miles too far north. At this point there is an offset to the south and the short stretch between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers is approximately on the theoretical parallel. The southern boundary of Tennessee is only less inaccurate than the northern. It dodges both north and south of its supposed location along the 35th parallel.

"North Carolina is among the states suffering the greatest losses on account of boundary errors. Its diagonal boundary with South Carolina is supposed to extend to the 35th parallel before turning west. It actually makes the turn 10 miles short of the goal, then jumps 12 miles north of the parallel and continues west. The net loss of territory to the state is estimated at between 500 and 1,000 square miles."

Conscience Money

Logansport, Ind.—B. H. Hudson, superintendent of the Logansport division of the Pennsylvania railroad here, has received $100 conscience money for the railroad company. The note attached to the money explained that the sender had kept the amount in his possession for years, but did not disclose the manner in which he had obtained it.

Resort to Caves

Tokyo.—Reports from Seoul, Korea, state that more than 8,000 residents of that place are dwelling in caves just as their ancestors did in a primitive age. It is believed that most of these cave-dwellers are members of the poverty-stricken, unemployed class.

In contrast to deficits shown in previous years, the state railways of Italy this year boast of a net income of $7,000,000.

It seems to us as though the management erred in not playing last Saturday's football game under the rules for water polo.—Marion Star.

CREEK INDIANS USED NO JAILS

Lash and Gun Constituted Only Penalties.

Okmulgee, Okla.—The ancient whipping tree and the old capitol of a vanished Indian nation still are doing service in this city.

In the heart of Okmulgee stands the council house of the Creek nation, erected in 1878. The Young Men's Christian association and the chamber of commerce have their headquarters in the building, and a bus line uses one corner for an office.

The building and its grounds occupy a block in the center of the business district. Among the numerous trees on the grounds are two where the executions and the legal whippings took place.

The Creeks had no jails. They had only two methods of punishment—whipping and shooting. The punishment for robbery, for instance, was 50 lashes for the first offense, 100 lashes for the second, and death for the third. In cases of execution, the condemned Indian was tied to the tree and shot.

Damage suits were settled in cash, work or 50 lashes on the bare back.

The council house is a two-story building of native sandstone. On the first floor were the departments of government; on the second, the legislative halls.

The Creeks were one of the five civilized tribes moved by the government from the southeastern part of the United States to this territory about 1830.

They established here a complete system of government, similar to the American republic, but with much simpler forms.

Their legislature was composed of the "house of kings" (senate) and the "house of warriors." The head of the state was the principal chief, elected for four years by a majority vote of the males of the nation. His assistant was the second chief elected in the same manner.

There was a high court and a district court, each district having a prosecuting attorney, a judge and a company of light horsemen, who were in the nature of mounted police.

The council house belongs to the city of Okmulgee. Efforts are now being made among the remaining Indians to move the building to a national Indian park planned near here.

Agricultural Outlook In Ohio Encouraging According to Reports

COLUMBUS—Ohio farmers are facing an era of prosperity.

That, briefly, is the United States government's summary of the agricultural outlook in the state.

C. J. West, federal crop statistician, from data compiled in all sections of the state, says that genreal conditions are somewhat better than last year.

Dairymen and live stock interests are also facing better prospects.

"A good corn crop in Ohio is always indicative of prosperity," West said. "The crop is good this year. This insures an abundant supply of feed. A big percentage of the corn crop is marketed through feeding on the farm, and as live stock prices are satisfactory, the corn thus used will bring dollars into the pockets of Ohio farmers."

West also pointed out that the big cotton crop in the south is beneficial to the live stock industry, as a plentiful supply of cottonseed meal will be available at moderate prices.

Although the early potato crop was somewhat less than in former years, the late supply is better and is bringing a higher price. This means that growers will recuperate their early losses on the late yield.

Potatoes are always a big item in the United States. When the national supply is less than 400,000,000 bushels the demand is big enough to push up prices. The supply this years is less than 350,000,000 bushels, which accounts for the present high price.

West predicted that potato prices would not fall below the present level and said that a gradual rise could be expected.

During an election at Ennis, Ireland, this fall, one ballot box was taken thirty miles to a polling place, guarded through the day, then was sealed and taken back to the courthouse to be opened and reveal that not a vote had been placed in it.

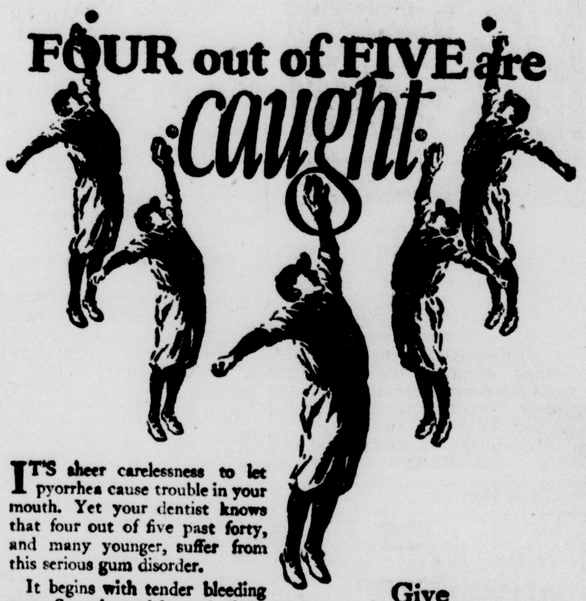
FOUR out of FIVE are caught



IT'S sheer carelessness to let pyorrhea cause trouble in your mouth. Yet your dentist knows that four out of five past forty, and many younger, suffer from this serious gum disorder.

It begins with tender bleeding gums. Soon the teeth loosen in their sockets and the poison spreads through the system, causing rheumatism, neuritis, and other similar diseases.

Forhan's for the Gums is the simple, easy way to keep you out of pyorrhea's clutches. It's a pleasant dentifrice that firms the gums and gives the teeth a thorough cleansing. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid which has been used by dentists for the last 15 years in the treatment of pyorrhea.

If used regularly and in time, Forhan's prevents or checks pyorrhea and so is an important safeguard to health. Begin today to use Forhan's night and morning as a wise precaution. All druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

Give Your Dentist a chance

Too many wait until an aching tooth forces them into the dentist's chair. It is folly to suffer this needless pain when all you have to do is to give your dentist a chance to prevent trouble in your mouth by visiting him at least twice a year for a thorough teeth and gum inspection.

Wesleyan and St. Xavier In Battle For Conference Title

BISHOPS ARE FAVORED TO DEFEAT MUSKETEERS

Win Would Give Delaware Combine First Claim in Ranking With no Tie Games to Mar Record; Cincinnatians and Oberlin, Both With Tie Games, Would Lead Race if Former is Victor.

By Stanley D. Koch.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—Having considerably more trouble than the famed hero of Pilgrim's Progress in his passage through temptations and doubts, and needing all the agility of an Aeneas in evading the Scyllas and Charybdi of football, St. Xavier's eleven is awaiting the answer of Saturday's battle with Ohio Wesleyan with anticipation and hope, the latter borne of desperation.

For on this game hinges the Saint's championship aspirations. With these two centers of gridiron and intellectual endeavor fighting it out, and Oberlin's championship claim filed and approved, the Ohio Conference 1925 football race is giving its last futile gasps. True, there still remain a few games carded for Thanksgiving day, but these will not affect the title.

An Ohio Wesleyan victory will give the battling bishops not only an undefeated record but the first claim in ranking in that Wesleyan has no tie games to mar its season run. Oberlin, on the other hand, was tied by Mt. Union. St. Xavier, too, has played an even-up match with Wittenberg, so that a win for the Musketeers will mean a definite tie with Oberlin, while a defeat gives the Wesleyan crew a clear claim in the ranking, despite the equal percentage with Oberlin.

And the Saints, despite the fact that they enter the final game at Cincinnati as the underdogs, are far from out of the race. There are several reasons. First, if there be any advantage in a home field, the St. Xavier eleven gets it. Second, its schedude has allowed it two weeks' rest while last week-end saw Wesleyan defeating Denison, and third, Wesleyan started the year at a reasonably high pitch against Ohio State and then had the Ohio and the Syracuse games toward which the team was pointed. St. Xavier was not considered necessarily a championship team early in the season, so it means that the battling Bishops will again have to be driven at a high pitch against so worthy an adversary.

The Saints, on the other hand, have worked up to this game with a slowly increasing effort and the Conference finale finds them at their highest pitch.

If the Cincinnati line can break up the charges of Wesleyan and the zone defense dissipate the constant passing threat, there is probably enough strength in the Saint attack to win. But Blickle must be stopped and Pearce, Turney et al, upset, to allow the Musketeers to top. This year's records, however, have shown that pre-game dope is only created to be disproved.

Cleveland's annual grudge — or on the 1925 basis—fudge fight take place when Case and Western Reserve hook up at the fifth city. Both teams have shown the strength of nonogenarians suffering from complete paralysis, but the annual clash brings up a stage of football created from rivalry that ranks with a pushball contest between college freshman and sophomores as a matter of inborn hate. Western Reserve, in accordance with the custom of years, probably will not lose, even if it doesn't win.

On Friday, Wittenberg and Ohio University meet at Athens, with the Lutherans favored to con. Only at times, has Wittenberg shown flashes of the teamwork that the early season indicated, while Ohio, due to its remarkable showing against Cincinnati last week, partially redeemed its heretofore erratic play.

It will be a good game, but it's doubtful if the Green and White is strong enough for Wittenberg.

Kenyon vs. Akron at Akron should result in another Episcopalian triumph, for Coach Coleman's team is seemingly too weak to despoil the good record of the Gambier men. The backfield of the purple is powerful and the line is strong while Akron is more or less generally anemic.

After the Oberlin defeat, Coach Boles, of Wooster, foresaw a string of tragedies for his eleven. But the defeat by Ohio State was the only other loss sustained by the Black and Gold eleven, and with Saturday's game with Denison played at Wooster as the season's finale, it looks as if the Wooster eleven will end the season with an .833 percentage. The Big Red may upset the dope, but it will take all of Coach Livingston's skill to repel the attacks of Blough, Fox and Siskowic.

Mount Union, of course, is heavily favored over Hiram in the annual game at Hiram, and Muskingum carries the edge over Heidelberg when this pair meet at Tiffin.

England's New "Jimmy" Wilde"

Ernie Jarvis.

This photo of Ernie Jarvis, British flyweight now in the United States, was taken while Ernie was falling for the Charleston. He is referred to as England's new Jimmy Wilde, but has some distance to go to prove his claim to the title.

TEX ASKS KEARNS TO "COME DOWN"

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Tex Rickard and others behind the Christmas fund show at the New Garden, Dec. 23, today are awaiting word from Jack Kearns as to the lowest quotation he would place upon the services of Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, as one of the principals in the feature bout. Tommy Milligan, of England, already has accepted terms for the match.

Rickard wired Kearns a final offer last night, asking him to moderate his demands in the name of charity. The welterweight title would go with the match.

BATTLE SHARON IN LAST GAME

Laughlin Favorite in Press League Tilt.

One step nearer the championship of the Pittsburgh Press Northwestern Division Soccer league as a result of their 3 to 1 victory over the Grove City Glencoe Thistles here Saturday, the Homer Laughlin club next Saturday will clash with Sharon in the final scheduled game of the circuit.

The engagement will be staged at Newell park and a victory as the result is confidently forecast by players and followers of the club.

The Laughlinns at present are tied with the Ellwood City Shelbys for the league lead and both teams probably will win this week's contests.

In that event, it is probable, according to Manager Shaw, that a post season game will be arranged between the Laughlins and the Shelbys for the championship of the circuit.

ANDERSON BEATS EUROPEAN CHAMP

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—If Europe was disposed to abide by results, Eddie Anerson, of Wyoming, today would be the featherweight champion of the continent. He defeated Edouard Mascart, European champion, in a 12-round bout last night, and defeated him so badly that the decision of a referee and two judges met with the unanimous approval of 4,500 customers, a rare occurrence locally.

However, the International federation only recognizes a change in the title when one European beats anothr, so the American must remain just plain Eddie Anderson.

PASADENA MAY HAVE TO BEG FOR NEW YEAR'S FOE

Hawley, Dartmouth Coach, Has Declared Against It; Illinois Means to Abide by Big Ten Conference Rules, Prohibiting Post Season Games; and Yale Refuses to be Considered.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—According to the good word from the tournament of roses officials at Pasadena, Dartmouth, Yale and Illinois are under consideration as possible opponents of Washington for the coast's annual post-season football game on New Year's day. Someone, apparently, has given the officials three guesses and the third time didn't prove it.

The writer's understanding is that none of the three teams mentioned have the slightest intention of playing a post-season football game. Jess Hawley, Dartmouth head coach, already has declared against it. Athletic heads at Illinois have gone on record to the effect that they mean to abide by the Big Ten conference rules, which declare postseason games taboo.

As for Yale, it has steadfastly declined to be a party to any such proceeding for some years back, and after viewing the 1925 outfit against Princeton, it is hardly likely that Yale will change its rather complex mind.

A bird in the hand, they say, is worth two in the bullrushes or something. Therefore, be it known to all men by these presents:

What, if anything, is the matter with the University of Alabama. The silence seems to be deafening.

There is absolutely nothing, or even less, the matter with the University of Alabama, and the writer has reason to believe that it would hearken to the slick city words of the coast promoters, if properly approached.

It is one of three unbeaten and untied elevens in the country, the other two being Dartmouth and Fordham. The latter, of course, lacks national significance and, therefore, is out like an ex-window.

Alabama doesn't lack national consequence. It doesn't lack anything. Any team that can run up 250 points against 7 for the combined opposition, a kindly term in this case, must have plenty.

It has, in fact, a great scoring machine, built around Pooley Hubert. It has, on its own recognizance, something of a defensive unit, built around Pooley Hubert. Pooley seems to be quite a young man. He made 18 of the first 20 tackles against Georgia Tech this year. Then turned around and gave the most remarkable exhibition of blocking and interfering seen in the south in many a season.

Pooley also runs, punts and forward passes in the immemorial manner, so dear to the heart of the college correspondent. They say he is a composite picture of all the great stars the south has known in 10 years.

That section is proud of Pooley and the Alabama team. It thinks Pasadena ought to know them better. It is the writer's idea that Pasadena could look further and do worse.

Wesleyan and St. Xavier In Battle For Conference Title

BISHOPS ARE FAVORED TO DEFEAT MUSKETEERS

Win Would Give Delaware Combine First Claim in Ranking With no Tie Games to Mar Record; Cincinnatians and Oberlin, Both With Tie Games, Would Lead Race if Former is Victor.

By Stanley D. Koch.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17.—Having considerably more trouble than the famed hero of Pilgrim's Progress in his passage through temptations and doubts, and needing all the agility of an Aeneas in evading the Scyllas and Charybdi of football, St. Xavier's eleven is awaiting the answer of Saturday's battle with Ohio Wesleyan with anticipation and hope, the latter borne of desperation.

For on this game hinges the Saint's championship aspirations. With those two centers of gridiron and intellectual endeavor fighting it out, and Oberlin's championship claim filed and approved, the Ohio Conference 1925 football race is giving its last futile gasps. True, there still remain a few games carded for Thanksgiving day, but these will not affect the title.

An Ohio Wesleyan victory will give the battling bishops not only an undefeated record but the first claim in ranking in that Wesleyan has no tie games to mar its season run. Oberlin, on the other hand, was tied by Mt. Union. St. Xavier, too, has played an even-up match with Wittenberg, so that a win for the Musketeers will mean a definite tie with Oberlin, while a defeat gives the Wesleyan crew a clear claim in the ranking, despite the equal percentage with Oberlin.

And the Saints, despite the fact that they enter the final game at Cincinnati as the underdogs, are far from out of the race. There are several reasons. First, if there be any advantage in a home field, the St. Xavier eleven gets it. Second, its schedule has allowed it two weeks' rest while last week-end saw Wesleyan defeating Denison, and third, Wesleyan started the year at a reasonably high pitch against Ohio State and then had the Ohio and the Syracuse games toward which the team was pointed. St. Xavier was not considered necessarily a championship team early in the season, so it means that the battling Bishops will again have to be driven at a high pitch against so worthy an adversary.

The Saints, on the other hand, have worked up to this game with a slowly increasing effort and the Conference finale finds them at their highest pitch.

If the Cincinnati line can break up the charges of Wesleyan and the zone defense dissipate the constant passing threat, there is probably enough strength in the Saint attack to win. But Blickle must be stopped and Pearce, Turney et al, upset, to allow the Musketeers to top. This year's records, however, have shown that pre-game dope is only created to be disproved.

Cleveland's annual grudge — or on the 1925 basis—fudge fight take place when Case and Western Reserve hook up at the fifth city. Both teams have shown the strength of nonogenarians suffering from complete paralysis, but the annual clash brings up a stage of football created from rivalry that ranks with a pushball contest between college freshman and sophomores as a matter of inborn hate. Western Reserve, in accordance with the custom of years, probably will not lose, even if it doesn't win.

On Friday, Wittenberg and Ohio University meet at Athens, with the Lutherans favored to cop. Only at times, has Wittenberg shown flashes of the teamwork that the early season indicated, while Ohio, due to its remarkable showing against Cincinnati last week, partially redeemed its heretofore erratic play.

It will be a good game, but it's doubtful if the Green and White is strong enough for Wittenberg.

Kenyon vs. Akron at Akron should result in another Episcopalian triumph, for Coach Coleman's team is seemingly too weak to despoil the good record of the Gambier men. The backfield of the purple is powerful and the line is strong while Akron is more or less generally anemic.

After the Oberlin defeat, Coach Boles, of Wooster, foresaw a string of tragedies for his eleven. But the defeat by Ohio State was the only other loss sustained by the Black and Gold eleven, and with Saturday's game with Denison played at Wooster as the season's finale, it looks as if the Wooster eleven will end the season with an .833 percentage. The Big Red may upset the dope, but it will take all of Coach Livingston's skill to repel the attacks of Blough, Fox and Siskowic.

Mount Union, of course, is heavily favored over Hiram in the annual game at Hiram, and Muskingum carries the edge over Heidelberg when this pair meet at Tiffin.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Tex Rickard and others behind the Christmas fund show at the New Garden, Dec. 23, today are awaiting word from Jack Kearns as to the lowest quotation he would place upon the services of Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, as one of the principals in the feature bout. Tommy Milligan, of England, already has accepted terms for the match.

Rickard wired Kearns a final offer last night, asking him to moderate his demands in the name of charity. The welterweight title would go with the match.

Pearce, Turney, Ahead

Harley Pearce and Bill Turney, star Wesleyan backs, with 36 and 35 points, respectively, continued their battle for Ohio conference individual scoring honors in their team's 26 to 0 triumph over Denison Saturday. Each scored a touchdown.

BATTLE SHARON IN LAST GAME

Laughlin Favorite in Press League Tilt.

One step nearer the championship of the Pittsburgh Press Northwestern Division Soccer league as a result of their 3 to 1 victory over the Grove City Glencoe Thistles here Saturday, the Homer Laughlin club next Saturday will clash with Sharon in the final scheduled game of the circuit.

The engagement will be staged at Newell park and a victory as the result is confidently forecast by players and followers of the club.

The Laughlinns at present are tied with the Ellwood City Shelbys for the league lead and both teams probably will win this week's contests.

In that event, it is probable, according to Manager Shaw, that a post season game will be arranged between the Laughlins and the Shelbys for the championship of the circuit.

SHOOTS 276 IN DUCKPINS

William Kelly Turns Trick on Patterson Alleys.

Shooting 276 in duckpins is not being done seven nights out of the week.

It is not being done that many times in 365 nights; in fact, it is such an infrequent occurrence, especially in this section of the bowling belt that all the more credit goes to one William Kelly, of the East End, who toppled the maples at Patterson's alleys, in the East End, only recently, for exactly that score.

Officials of the Patterson alleys vouch for this performance.

It took place in a regular match. Kelly is said to have registered six straight strikes, nine out on the first ball in the next, and he then struck his way out.

Bishops Could Claim Gridiron Title on Comparative Scores

DELAWARE, Nov. 17.—Ohio Wesleyan's football team is 12 points better than Michigan, 15 points better than Illinois, 37 points better than Pennsylvania, 40 better than Yale, 60 better than the Army, 88 better than Notre Dame and 100 points better than Minnesota, only undefeated eleven in the Big Ten, on comparative scores figured out by fans here following the Battling Bishops' 3 to 3 tie with Syracuse.

"Forget that dope! You have to beat St. Xavier yet before you are even champions of the Ohio Conference,' said Coach George Gauthier here this week when he found some of his men busy with the comparative scores.

The best dope sheet prepared here yet however is the one arriving at the above scores which rivals the one of recent years in which Oberlin was found to be gridiron champion of the world. Syracuse, with Wesleyan tied, beat Indiana, 14-0. Indiana lost, 17-14, to Northwestern, which defeated Michigan, 3-2. Michigan defeated Illinois, 3-0, and Illinois walloped Pennsylvania, 24-2. Penn had a 16-13 win over Yale which defeated Army, 28-7. Army defeated Notre Dame, 27-0. Notre Dame defeated Minnesota, 18-7. By adding and subtracting according to wins and losses in the above scores the margin of superiority is figured.

By the same system Ohio Wesleyan would have the following margin on the following teams: Wisconsin 100, Iowa 106, Ohio State 121, Wooster 138, Mt. Union 140, Oberlin 140, Reserve 148, Kenyon 135, Transylvania 151, Miami 135.

Meanwhile Coach Ganthier and Ohio Wesleyan fans and players are wondering if they can beat the scrappy St. Xavier team and are making strenuous preparations for the contest.

During the first day of London's fall automobile show this year, orders were taken for 100,000 cars, valued at $100,000,000.

Expert Doubts Whether Red Grange Has Anything On Great Jim Thorpe

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Grange or Thorpe?

The country seems to be pretty well divided as to which of the two is the greatest football player that ever graced the gridiron. It is a moot question.

Many of the critics who saw Grange run all over Pennsylvania immediately acclaimed him as the greatest of all time. The writer is pleased to doubt it. He doubts whether Grange has anything on the old Jim Thorpe as a ball-runner. He knows that Thorpe added to his all-around value by his punting and goal kicking, neither of which Grange happens to have in his repertoire.

Hard to Pick Best.

The writer, remembering Heston, of Michigan; Mahan, of Harvard, and Coye, of Yale, as a few examples also feels that the field has been narrowed down inordinately when only Grange and Thorpe are considered as the all highest. It seems to me that there have been too many wonderful football players for any man to pick the greatest without fear of contradiction.

However, the Grange versus Thorpe equation is interesting, if nothing else. It couples two ball-runners of a distinctly similar type. Neither, for example, is the will-o-the-wisp type, the kind that Knute Rockne refers to as a "rabbit runner.'

Thorpe wasted no time with a lot of dodging and doubling. He pursued a straight line toward the goal as nearly as possible. So does Grange. In fact, the Illinois phantom follows the straight line a trifle more closely than Thorpe did.

This, to an open field runner, is a tacit compliment. It means deception without false motion, speed without haste, as it were. It means that Grange's dodging is achieved with a minimum of effort and, consequently, is all the more deceptive.

Keeps Feet in Mud.

One thing about Grange's running seems to have escaped the critics. He surprised nearly everybody by his ability to hold his feet in a sea of soup against Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, Grange didn't even slip or skid momentarily on that occasion.

The answer is that, with all his speed and elusiveness, he puts his feet down more firmly than any ball-runner the writer has seen. To see him run is to visualize a man going through the motions of a rather hasty walk. There seems to be no conscious speed there, until you see some of the defenders try to catch him. Then you realize that at least one man on the field is moving in something of a hurry.

PIN BOY SCORES 205 IN DUCKPINS

A 14-year-old youngster today holds something of an edge on Liberty alley performers, in the matter of high scores, as a result of his performance last night.

With unemployment decreasing and a crop of 200,000 tons of sugar this year Hungary is happier than for some time.

By Norman E. Brown.

It's Hurry Up Yost's hour again. The clock has turned back and brought before us another great machine of the type that made Yost's advent at Michigan the most spectacular one in the history of the game and in the short space of five seasons caused him to be the most talked of football mentor in the game.

For 19 years Yost's name has carried the tradition that those early teams established. He has not, however, been living on that reputation. He has been laboring diligently every year, trying to find the nucleus for another team. And now he seems to have found it. This year's team is the nucleus. Benny Friedman, greatest quarterback in the country today, returns next season, as do a goodly portion of the other stars. Benny and these men will carry into the 1926 squad a spirit of victory and confidence that is a component part of a great team. Friedman, too, will carry into the next campaign a year's experience under the fire of the best teams the Big Ten could produce, which means something.

Was a Great Tackle.

Back in 1901 Fielding Yost, famous as a tackle at Ohio Northern University, University of West Virginia and Lafayette, took up his duties as coach at Ann Arbor. Michigan belonged to the Western Conference then, although it withdrew for a time later. During the first five years of Yost's reign, the Michigan team he developed won 15 of the 17 conference games played. They lost one and tied the other.

The very first team that took the field under Yost scored a total of 550 points for the season without being scored upon, a record never equaled before or since. Despite this wonderful record, Wisconsin claimed half the title because of the fact that it also had gone through the conference schedule undefeated.

Relented Next Year.

The following season Michigan scored 644 points and allowed the opposition but 12—a total of 1,194 points against 12 over a span of two campaigns.

The players on those teams?

Ask any old Michigan grad who they were and then prepare for an evening of reminiscences.

Willis Heston, of course. He stands for all that is football at Michigan. Weeks. "Boss" Weeks, one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time. Dan McGugin.

All played a part in the team that came to be known as the "point-a-minute machine."

In 13 years in the western conference Yost's teams have scored a total of 875 points against its Big Ten rivals as compared to 279 points scored against the Wolverines.

Michigan has won 36 conference games, lost 11 and tied two.

When the Northwestern surprise was recorded, recently, Michigan had beaten Indiana 63 to 0, Wiscons'n 21 to 0 and Illinois 3 to 0. The result of the Northwestern game, 3 to 2 in that team's favor is well known.

These scores plus the 10-0 win over Ohio State, bring Michigan's total up to 964 points as against 781 for its opponents and the list of conference victories to 40 and defeats to 12.

A wonderful record this. And these conference scores do not relate all the glory that has been Michigan's.

Correct this sentence: "Our daughter is 16," said he, "and never has attempted to advise, or lecture, us."—Akron Beacon-Journal.

SHOOTS 276 IN DUCKPINS

William Kelly Turns Trick on Patterson Alleys.

Shooting 276 in duckpins is not being done seven nights out of the week.

It is not being done that many times in 365 nights; in fact, it is such an infrequent occurrence, especially in this section of the bowling belt that all the more credit goes to one William Kelly, of the East End, who toppled the maples at Patterson's alleys, in the East End, only recently, for exactly that score.

Officials of the Patterson alleys vouch for this performance.

It took place in a regular match. Kelly is said to have registered six straight strikes, nine out on the first ball in the next, and he then struck his way out.

Bishops Could Claim Gridiron Title on Comparative Scores

DELAWARE, Nov. 17.—Ohio Wesleyan's football team is 12 points better than Michigan, 15 points better than Illinois, 37 points better than Pennsylvania, 40 better than Yale, 60 better than the Army, 88 better than Notre Dame and 100 points better than Minnesota, only undefeated eleven in the Big Ten, on comparative scores figured out by fans here following the Battling Bishops' 3 to 3 tie with Syracuse.

"Forget that dope! You have to beat St. Xavier yet before you are even champions of the Ohio Conference,' said Coach George Gauthier here this week when he found some of his men busy with the comparative scores.

The best dope sheet prepared here yet however is the one arriving at the above scores which rivals the one of recent years in which Oberlin was found to be gridiron champion of the world. Syracuse, with Wesleyan tied, beat Indiana, 14-0. Indiana lost, 17-14, to Northwestern, which defeated Michigan, 3-2. Michigan defeated Illinois, 3-0, and Illinois walloped Pennsylvania, 24-2. Penn had a 16-13 win over Yale which defeated Army, 28-7. Army defeated Notre Dame, 27-0. Notre Dame defeated Minnesota, 18-7. By adding and subtracting according to wins and losses in the above scores the margin of superiority is figured.

By the same system Ohio Wesleyan would have the following margin on the following teams: Wisconsin 100, Iowa 106, Ohio State 121, Wooster 138, Mt. Union 140, Oberlin 140, Reserve 148, Kenyon 135, Transylvania 151, Miami 135.

Meanwhile Coach Gauthier and Ohio Wesleyan fans and players are wondering if they can beat the scrappy St. Xavier team and are making strenuous preparations for the contest.

During the first day of London's fall automobile show this year, orders were taken for 100,000 cars, valued at $100,000,000.

Yost Nears Thousand-Point Total in Big Ten History

Expert Doubts Whether Red Grange Has Anything On Great Jim Thorpe

By Norman E. Brown.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Grange or Thorpe?

The country seems to be pretty well divided as to which of the two is the greatest football player that ever graced the gridiron. It is a moot question.

Many of the critics who saw Grange run all over Pennsylvania immediately acclaimed him as the greatest of all time. The writer is pleased to doubt it. He doubts whether Grange has anything on the old Jim Thorpe as a ball-runner. He knows that Thorpe added to his all-around value by his punting and goal kicking, neither of which Grange happens to have in his repertoire.

Hard to Pick Best.

The writer, remembering Heston, of Michigan; Mahan, of Harvard, and Coye, of Yale, as a few examples also feels that the field has been narrowed down inordinately when only Grange and Thorpe are considered as the all highest. It seems to me that there have been too many wonderful football players for any man to pick the greatest without fear of contradiction.

However, the Grange versus Thorpe equation is interesting, if nothing else. It couples two ball-runners of a distinctly similar type. Neither, for example, is the will-'o-the-wisp type, the kind that Knute Rockne refers to as a "rabbit runner.'

Thorpe wasted no time with a lot of dodging and doubling. He pursued a straight line toward the goal as nearly as possible. So does Grange. In fact, the Illinois phantom follows the straight line a trifle more closely than Thorpe did.

This, to an open field runner, is a tacit comp'iment. It means deception without false motion, speed without haste, as it were. It means that Grange's dodging is achieved with a minimum of effort and, consequently, is all the more deceptive.

Keeps Feet in Mud.

One thing about Grange's running seems to have escaped the critics. He surprised nearly everybody by his ability to hold his feet in a sea of soup against Pennsylvania. As a matter of fact, Grange didn't even slip or skid momentarily on that occasion.

The answer is that, with all his speed and elusiveness, he puts his feet down more firmly than any ball-runner the writer has seen. To see him run is to visualize a man going through the motions of a rather hasty walk. There seems to be no conscious speed there, until you see some of the defenders try to catch him. Then you realize that at least one man on the field is moving in something of a hurry.

By Norman E. Brown.

It's Hurry Up Yost's hour again. The clock has turned back and brought before us another great machine of the type that made Yost's advent at Michigan the most spectacular one in the history of the game and in the short space of five seasons caused him to be the most talked of football mentor in the game.

For 19 years Yost's name has carried the tradition that those early teams established. He has not, however, been living on that reputation. He has been laboring diligently every year, trying to find the nucleus for another team. And now he seems to have found it. This year's team is the nucleus. Benny Friedman, greatest quarterback in the country today, returns next season, as do a goodly portion of the other stars. Benny and these men will carry into the 1926 squad a spirit of victory and confidence that is a component part of a great team. Friedman, too, will carry into the next campaign a year's experience under the fire of the best teams the Big Ten could produce, which means something.

Was a Great Tackle.

Back in 1901 Fielding Yost, famous as a tackle at Ohio Northern University, University of West Virginia and Lafayette, took up his duties as coach at Ann Arbor. Michigan belonged to the Western Conference then, although it withdrew for a time later. During the first five years of Yost's reign, the Michigan team he developed won 15 of the 17 conference games played. They lost one and tied the other.

The very first team that took the field under Yost scored a total of 550 points for the season without being scored upon, a record never equaled before or since. Despite this wonderful record, Wisconsin claimed half the title because of the fact that it also had gone through the conference schedule undefeated.

Relented Next Year.

The following season Michigan scored 644 points and allowed the opposition but 12—a total of 1,194 points against 12 over a span of two campaigns.

The players on those teams?

Ask any old Michigan grad who they were and then prepare for an evening of reminiscences.

Dan McGugin.

All played a part in the team that came to be known as the "point-a-minute machine."

In 13 years in the western conference Yost's teams have scored a total of 875 points against its Big Ten rivals as compared to 279 points scored against the Wolverines.

Michigan has won 36 conference games, lost 11 and tied two.

When the Northwestern surprise was recorded, recently, Michigan had beaten Indiana 63 to 0, Wiscons'n 21 to 0 and Illinois 3 to 0. The result of the Northwestern game, 3 to 2 in that team's favor is well known.

These scores plus the 10-0 win over Ohio State, bring Michigan's total up to 964 points as against 281 for its opponents and the list of conference victories to 40 and defeats to 12.

A wonderful record this. And these conference scores do not relate all the glory that has been Michigan's.

PIN BOY SCORES 205 IN DUCKPINS

A 14-year-old youngster today holds something of an edge on Liberty alley performers, in the matter of high scores, as a result of his performance last night.

New Offer for Grange

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Latest reports say that "Red' Grange would play "pro' football under the colors of the Chicago Bears when he leaves college. Reports also declared that Earl Britton, his team mate, would be his "pro" mate, as well.

With unemployment decreasing and a crop of 200,000 tons of sugar this year Hungary is happier than for some time.
